Photograph of a .22 L. R. bullet approximately 10 inches from the muzzle of a Reising automatic pistol. What appears to be dense smoke issuing from the muzzle is largely powder gas. Spark photography shows the action of these powder gases in a manner not possible by any other means.

A Flash of Lightning Took This Photograph

LIGHTNING, scientifically controlled in the Peters Physical Laboratory, took this picture of a .22 L. R. bullet ten inches from the muzzle of a Reising Automatic Pistol. The exposure was only one millionth of a second—so fast that the bullet appears stationary. Not the slightest blur to show that it was in motion. Yet that bullet was actually traveling through space at the rate of 950 feet per second.

An interesting photographic novelty? Man, it's a revolutionary technical achievement that marks the beginning of a new era in the history of small-arms ammunition! Day by day the experts in the Peters plant are taking similar photographs of cartridge loads and shot charges at every stage between the gun and the target. They are checking actual performance against mathematical calculations and subjecting mechanical construction details to visual tests.

Never before has such comprehensive and accurate knowledge of ammunition performance been available to any manufacturer. But now even the man who pulls the trigger can see what takes place from the instant the expanding gases accelerate the bullet on its initial flight until it registers a "hit."

EDITORIAL

To Camp Perry Members:

There are probably a thousand of you men who are reading this issue of THE AMERICAN RIFLEMAN for the first time as members of the National Rifle Association. Many of you joined the N. R. A. at Camp Perry because everyone else out there belonged and because it seemed to be the proper thing to do. The chances are that you have the idea that the National Rifle Matches are the principal activity of the National Rifle Association. Don't let that idea exist in your minds a moment longer. The National Rifle Matches are the mainspring which keeps the wheels of rifle-shooting moving throughout the year in the United States. They provide the incentive which makes a man want to keep shooting through the year in order that he may get back to Perry again. They provide an opportunity for first-hand instruction by the best instructors that the Army can get together, and I imagine you left Camp Perry this year with many new ideas in regard to the right way to shoot as well as in regard to the real accuracy possibilities of the rifle.

For these reasons the National Rifle Association believes in the National Rifle Matches, has fought for them in the past and is prepared to fight for them again in the future when necessary. However, the National Rifle Matches occupy but three weeks of the shooting year, just a little over 5 per cent. The activities of the N. R. A. go right along during the other 95 per cent of the time, and they reach into many aspects of the shooter's life which are not touched at all at Camp Perry. For instance, you may want to take a hunting trip. There is probably some question in your mind as to the best rifle to buy for the particular trip you expect to take. If you want absolutely unbiased information and suggestions, ask the N. R. A. Townsend Whelen is retained by the Association to answer just such questions. Or perhaps the shotgun game is new to you and you would like the same kind of unprejudiced information in regard to scatterguns and their loads. Ask the N. R. A. You will get the information from Charles Askins, who is the outstanding authority in this country on shotguns. Examples of the kind of questions which these two men and Julian S. Hatcher, our pistol expert, are prepared to handle is given in the Dope Bag Section of this issue of THE AMERICAN RIFLEMAN. Keep your eye on the Dope Bag, even though you never write for personal information. You will find a world of interesting information in that section of the magazine every month.

Perhaps there is some gun you would like to own but you can not afford a new one. As a member of the N. R. A. you are entitled to one free advertisement a year, either to buy or to sell, in the Classified Ads which are carried under the Arms Chest heading in the back of the magazine. Here is a free service that saves members of the Association thousands of dollars every year and has enabled many a shooter to turn some of his guns into ready cash when he needed the money.

Perhaps in the rush of things at Perry you failed to get your copy of the N. R. A. and D. C. M. price lists on guns, ammunition and accessories for N. R. A. members. This is another money-saving service which is available to you. If you haven't the price lists, drop a postal card to National Headquarters and ask for them.

Then there is the matter of shooting through the forty-nine weeks of the year that the National Matches are not in progress. The N. R. A., your Association, carries on, from January to December, a practically continuous program of nation-wide matches covering every type of small arm. These matches are of a national character, with competitors from all over the United States and its outlying possessions participating. However, you do not need to take any time away from your work or spend any money to travel in order to participate. You send your entry fee to National Headquarters and your targets come back by mail. You fire them in the presence of trustworthy witnesses and mail the targets or score cards back to Washington for official scoring and tabulation. The same kind of silver and bronze trophies which you saw on display at Camp Perry are awarded in these postal matches. Gold, silver and bronze medals, many of them of a more attractive design than those issued at Camp Perry, are awarded the winners. Unlike the Camp Perry Matches, you will find in these postal competitions many events which are limited to beginners, and others which are limited to rifles such as the Krag, which would be hopelessly outclassed at Camp Perry.

There is another angle in the question of anti-fire-arms legislation. If you have not been reading THE AMERICAN RIFLEMAN during the past two or three years you probably do not realize just how serious the situation is in regard to laws which are intended to deprive you of the right to own and to shoot guns of any type. This Association, which is now your Association, last year was instrumental in having killed in State legislatures no less than ninety-six such bills. By adding your name to the membership rolls of the N. R. A. you have helped to fight asinine legislation of this type. We may call on you during the year to get in touch with your State legislatures personally in order to combat some such law which may be presented in your own State. If you hear of any such laws being proposed for your State or city, you should immediately notify National Headquarters, and you may rest assured that everything possible will be done to keep them off the books.

There are a hundred and one services which are now open to you as a member of the N. R. A. You have not joined some organization which is interested only in three weeks of matches at Camp Perry. You are a member of the one Association in this country which has been fighting the shooter's battles for him continuously since 1871. You are one of a group of more than a hundred thousand red-blooded Americans who are intent on making America once again a Nation of Riflemen.

We will be glad to hear from you at any time with suggestions, criticisms or requests for service. If there is no rifle club in your town, let us tell you how to organize one. If you are in Washington during the year, drop in to see us.

Fraternally yours,

Secretary-Treasurer.

The National Matches

By L. J. HATHAWAY

AFTER a week of intensive preliminary training and practice, which centered around the Small-Arms Firing School in which 1,326 persons were enrolled for instruction in the rifle and pistol, the regular matches scheduled for this year got under way Monday morning, September 3. Though it had rained hard during the night, and at daybreak there appeared little prospect of the weather clearing, by 7:30 the sun was beginning to break through the clouds, and the firing commenced practically on time. Though a great deal of water had fallen in the night this quickly soaked into the dry ground, while a fresh wind from the northwest soon dried the grass on the mile-and-a-half firing line—and made things quite interesting for the shooters.

As will be recalled, the National Matches last year drew the largest crowd that had ever gathered at this meet before. The weather was unusually fine, a great amount of powder had been burned, with some new world's records established, and everyone went home satisfied that the event had been a great success. The matter received a good deal of publicity; and this was augmented by the publicity surrounding the National Rifle Association's successful fight to secure the matches again this year, and the final and again successful fight to assure the matches being held every year. It had, therefore, been felt that the matches this year would probably be larger, even, than those of last year.

This anticipation of the biggest shoot of all proved to have been justified, for there were gathered together on the Lake Erie range this year more shooting men—and women, too, for that matter—than had ever been seen before in any one place in this country. More than 3,000 shooters, and a firing line, this year, more than a mile and a half long! A truly imposing spectacle.

To convey briefly some idea of the proportions of this 1928 shooting tournament a few figures may not be out of place. A fair measure of the magnitude of any shoot can probably be had in the amount of powder burned—the number of rounds of ammunition actually expended. The figures obtained from the Ordnance Depot on the Camp grounds show that, during the first week, for instruction and practice alone, there were used up 338,600 rounds of .30-caliber M1 ammunition, and 71,500 rounds of .45-caliber pistol cartridges. These figures speak clearly, definitely, impressively. Yet they do not include the thousands of rounds of .38 Special ammunition used by the police teams and individuals in their revolvers; or the thousands of .22-caliber long-rifle cartridges used on the small-bore range, and at the machine rest, which was again in extensive use this year as an aid in determining the best make of ammunition for use in each individual small-bore rifle.

During the remaining two weeks there was expended in actual competition 711,400 rounds of .30-caliber M1 ammunition and 140,500 rounds of .45-caliber, which, again, does not include the .38 Special ammunition used by the police, which certainly ran into thousands of rounds; or the other ammunition of commercial manufacture, a hundred thousand or so rounds of which were probably consumed.

While on the subject of ammunition it may as well be stated here that the .30-caliber M1 ammunition issued for this year's matches was poor stuff, of decidedly inferior accuracy, and constituted the only serious blot on what in every other respect was a most successful shoot. Colonel Myers, Executive Officer of the matches this year, made an effort to have this serious condition corrected, but encountered various difficulties. It is hoped—and confidently expected—by all, that in future the accuracy of the ammunition issued for the greatest shoot of all the year will fully measure up to the high order of skill of the men shooting it.

The Camp census showed that 100 teams and 128 independent competitors had registered, in addition to the teams representing eleven police organizations in different cities, with a deputy sheriffs' team from Okmulgee, Okla.

While a large number of the shooters brought their own guns, the Ordnance Department issued 1,430 rifles and over 500 service pistols, and sold $7,000 worth of rifles and accessories.

The Police School, the published account of which last year attracted widespread attention among police organizations throughout the country, and which is a branch of the Small-Arms Firing School, was in full swing the first week at Perry this year, and was attended by every police officer in Camp, the teams and individuals present representing the police organizations of Los Angeles, Pasadena, Grand Rapids, Portland, Oreg., Baltimore, Muncie, Ind., Detroit, New York City, Seattle, St. Louis, Hartford, Conn., Toledo, Weymouth, Mass., with a deputy sheriffs' team from Okmulgee, Okla. The instruction this year was along the same lines as that of last year, although amplified and made more thorough and comprehensive. The school was again in charge of Capt. L. S. Spooner, assisted by Captain Braun, Captain Kellogg, Lieutenant Smith and Captain Chalker. Captain Kellogg was from the Chemical Warfare Service, while the three other officers were from the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga. The school opened with a demonstration, by Captain Spooner, of the .45-caliber Colt Automatic Service Pistol, which covered the principle of operation of the arm, method of dismounting and reassembling, the loading of the arm, and proper method of aiming and firing it. Captain Spooner also gave instruction in revolvers and their use.

Instruction in the use of smoke screens, gas masks, tear-gas—the latter in the form of both tear-gas candles and hand and rifle grenades—was under Captain Kellogg, as was also instruction in the use of the white phosphorous hand grenade for attacking purposes. Among other things the men were taught how to hide in a smoke screen, and advance unseen. As a practical demonstration along this line as well as in the use of tear-gas, a sham attack was staged against a small building which was occupied by several men. A smoke screen was laid down to windward of the building, and as the wind carried the smoke down to and about the building the attacking party advanced, armed with tear bombs. The attacking party were expected to keep hidden in the smoke. Failure to do this at any time counted as so many points against them. Their object was to force the men in the building to put on their gas masks without themselves being counted out of the engagement by points against them. An umpire was stationed in the building to keep check on both sides and determine the winner.

The Police School also gave instruction in the Thompson sub-machine gun, which is recognized as one of the most efficient man-killers, at close range, that has ever been devised. Practice with both automatic pistol and revolver was also provided.

Captain Braun and Lieutenant Smith gave the police their instruction in hand-to-hand fighting, and disarming and disabling criminals, the latter phase being based upon the principles of jiu-jitsu, which Lieutenant Smith had studied in the East under Japanese instructors. An officer of the Los Angeles police force was asked, after having completed the course in the Police School, just how practical he considered the training in disarming an adversary, under actual police conditions when the other fellow was armed and desperate, and would not hesitate to shoot upon the slightest indication of trouble. The officer replied that he considered this instruction highly practical, and that a properly trained man, if he kept his head, could, in nine cases out of ten, disarm his man and bring him to justice. The officer stated that this was being done in his department right along, and that training along this line, as well as in marksmanship, had a very marked effect upon the self-confidence and general morale of a man, transforming even a naturally timid man into one of courage, and often of actual daring.

Before saying good-bye to the Police School and its earnest and capable instructors mention must be made of the running man, and the surprise targets. The running-man range is similar to a small running-deer range, the lifesize silhouette of a man running the gauntlet of pistol fire in the place of the deer target, the shooting being at 50 yards. This target holds some surprises and disillusionments for those shooting on it for the first time. Also it occasionally reveals unsuspected skill.

The Police School is situated at the extreme west end of the great range at Perry. It is ideally located, as, with the small-bore range immediately to the east, and the running-deer range well beyond, it constitutes a little world of its own, away from the noise of the .30-caliber firing lines. Open fields stretch away to the north and west, while to the rear lies the now silent Erie Proving Ground. Out in the field to the west the Surprise-Target Range of the Police School has been laid out. In an area measuring perhaps 30 yards or more wide, by some 40 yards in length, there are installed ten targets the size and general shape of a man from the waist up. The targets are laid out five on either side of a central strip, down which the firer walks. The grass and weeds run knee-high here, and when the targets are lying face down on the ground their olive-colored backs can not be seen by the firer. The five targets on the right are operated by a group of five levers located well in the rear, and on the right. The targets on the left are similarly operated by a set of levers on the left. A man sits at each group of levers.

As the police officer undergoing instruction walks down the central area he is followed by the instructor in charge. This latter officer holds his hands behind him, and with the fingers of his right or left hand, signals to the men at the levers which targets are to be exposed. Up these bob, one at a time and without warning, from unexpected points in the traveled area, and remain exposed for three seconds. It calls for keen observation and quick work to get in very many hits on any one trip down the range. These targets themselves are of very simple construction, and can be made by anyone at a minimum expenditure of cash and effort.

Due to weather conditions, it required real shooting to make high scores in some of the matches this year. Take the case of the Wimbledon, fired Monday, September 3, and won by Chief Marine Gunner Wiggs, of the Marine Corps, against a field of 1,050 competitors. Wiggs made a perfect score of 100, yet the Monday on which this match was shot was one of the very worst days of the entire three-week period. Throughout the entire day there was a squally wind varying in strength from 15 to 30 miles per hour, and constantly shifting back and forth between 9 and 11 o'clock. The wind grew stronger as the day wore on. To make a perfect score at 1,000 yards on a day like this calls for steady holding and masterful wind-doping. Wiggs used windage varying from $2\frac{1}{4}$ points to 3 points, and entered the match at 1:30 p. m. The wind was lighter earlier in the day, and Fisher won the Navy Match with $\frac{3}{4}$ point of windage, shooting at 8 a. m.

These same weather conditions were particularly hard on the pistol-shooters, some of whose scores are quite remarkable in view of the difficulties encountered. The new 8-foot reinforced-concrete safety wall at the east end of the new pistol range introduced a new problem for the pistol-shooters to contend with. With a strong wind from a westerly direction powerful eddy currents suck in about the wall and keep the shooters guessing. This should provide the finest kind of practical experience for the police shooters, whose daily work offers them no choice of weather or locality in which they may be called upon to shoot. On Monday, September 3, the worst day of all, especially for pistol-shooting, the Los Angeles Police Team won the Police Pistol Team Match with a score of 1,061 out of 1,200, only two points above Portland, Ore. Detroit tied Portland for second place, but the decision went to Portland because they had the better score at rapid fire. While on the subject of police shooting, mention should be made of the fact that the shooting of the police this year was particularly good, not only in the regular police matches, but in all other pistol matches in which the police officers took part.

Down on the Small-Bore Range on Tuesday, September 4, another windy, squally day, Henry C. Wright, of Fresno, Calif., won the Individual Long-Range Match and was awarded the Peters Trophy. Wright used his heavy-barrel Winchester 52 equipped with Hart speed action and 8-power Fecker scope. He used 6 minutes left windage, and Remington Palma Match ammunition gave him what he held for.

As this is being written, C. V. Schmitt, inventor and manufacturer of the Schmitt loading tools, tells of his experience on Thursday afternoon at about 4 p. m., September 6. Schmitt was shooting in the Marine Corps Cup Match, when a squall struck the range. Rain obscured the bull's-eye, and many of the shooters immediately went off the target. By a clever trick in aiming Schmitt was able to stay on the target; and the wind increased so suddenly that in three shots he had to go from $1\frac{1}{2}$ to $3\frac{1}{2}$ points of windage. The wind plays some strange and freakish pranks on the great, unsheltered range at Perry.

Friday, the 7th, was the first really good day, though it did not look particularly promising at 7 a. m. At this hour very heavy black clouds loomed threateningly low on the near western horizon and off to the north, with higher clouds to the east, from behind which, however, the sun was shining. A brisk flurry of rain out of the east drove all under cover. This did not last long, however; and the sky cleared and the sun was out before the morning was very old. Much better conditions of wind prevailed on this day than any so far that week. At 7 a. m. all flags drooped and the smoke from the mess-hall stack floated almost straight up. By 10 a. m. a 5-mile wind had come up from 12 o'clock, shifting to 3 o'clock by noon, but with no appreciable change in strength. During the afternoon the wind freshened to about 8 to 10 miles, varying from 2 to 3 o'clock. The average temperature was probably about 68 degrees, and the shooters had little to complain about. Up and down its mile-and-a-half length the firing line crackled away from 7:30 in the morning until about 5 in the afternoon.

Some interesting things were happening on this particular day, two of the most interesting occurring down on the 300-meter International Range, which lies to the west, between the Running-Deer and Thousand-Yard Ranges. The "boiler house" of the new International Range contains 25 shooting booths, while the modern concrete target butts have, at the present time, eleven tar-armed with a plain, everyday, strictly as-issued National Match Springfield, which had not been specially tuned up in any way; and shooting offhand, without sling, or hip or body rest of any kind, and using regular 1928 issue ammunition, hung up a world's record in the standing position in the N. R. A. Free-Rifle Match, with a score of 177 out of a possible 200. The Swiss International expert, Hartman's, record of double the number of shots (40) standing, over this same course, made in 1925, is 352 out of 400.

While on the subject of the International Range it might interest some to learn that in winning the above match, all three positions, E. O. Swanson, of the Minnesota civilians, used in his pressure barrel Springfield, ammunition which he had loaded himself. His load consisted of 36.5 grains of HiVel back of the 172-grain National Match 9-degree boat-tail bullet, the powder being fired by No. 35 Winchester primers. This is a superbly accurate load of comparatively low velocity. Swanson chose it because of its light recoil, which permitted him to use his special small-bore kneeling position.

The firing line of the new pistol range. The shooting of the police this year, in all pistol matches in which they participated, was of a very high order

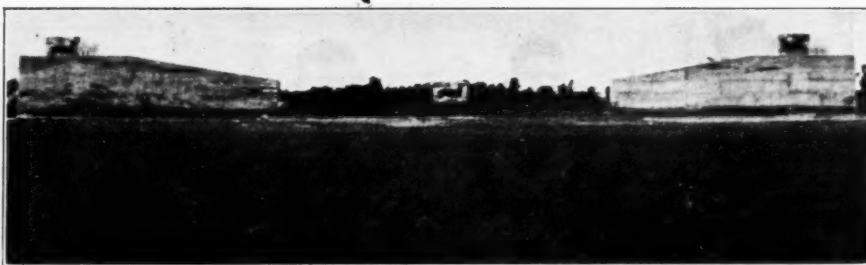

Running-Deer Range was very popular again this year, firing going on from morning until late afternoon. This range now lies near the far west, just east of the small-bore range. It is of entirely new and permanent construction, with none of the temporary improvisations of past years. The butts are of reinforced-concrete construction, with amply proportioned safety walls of the same material at either end. Located back near the firing line is a small building of permanent construction which serves as Colonel Critchfield's headquarters,

Henry C. Wright, of Fresno, Calif., and the Peters Trophy which he won and from which the range is operated. The Colonel is to be congratulated upon this splendid new range, and the shooters showed their appreciation of it by turning out in large numbers to try their hand on it.

A moving target always has a peculiar fascination for the majority of riflemen, most of whom possess the inborn instinct of the hunter, whether they have ever done any actual hunting or not; and it is probably safe to say that there was not a big-game hunter in camp but tried his skill on the deer target. Some of these exhibited remarkable skill, and had evidently had years of experience in shooting at moving objects. The majority, however, found it difficult to estimate the proper "lead" on the deer. It is comparatively easy to hit the deer somewhere; but to score on the small circular target just back of the animal's shoulder—ah, that is a different matter! From time to time Colonel Critchfield was asked what kind of a gun was to be used on the deer. With a wise and knowing smile he would reply, "Any gun—any gun at all, except a shotgun!"

Not all the good shooting this year was done by the veterans of the game. Young Lawrence Wilkens, 16-year-old lad of Norwood, Ohio, and a student in the Norwood High School, was high man on the Ohio civilian team in the Caswell Trophy Team Match over the Dewar course. Wilkens made possible at both 50 and 100 yards, thereby establishing a world's record, as this is something which had never been done before. Wilkens is runner-up in the Junior Matches, having been nosed out of first place by young D. S. McDougal, 16-year-old son of Col. D. C. McDougal, of Washington, D. C. Young McDougal won the National Individual Championship in the Junior Matches, while in the President's Match he placed third, against a field of 1,291 competitors.

Sunday, September 9, the day on which the Dewar and International Railway Matches were fired, was designated by Col. H. B. Myers, Executive Officer of the National Matches, as Visitors' Day, and special demonstrations of an unusual and very interesting nature were arranged for the occasion. The general public was invited to inspect Camp and witness the demonstrations. The day dawned absolutely ideal, with a light breeze from the west and not a cloud in the sky, the average temperature being in the neighborhood of 70 degrees. The great range, stretched out silent in the sun, with the calm waters of Lake Erie to the north, presented a peaceful, tranquil scene; and it was estimated that 15,000 persons were in camp that day to witness the demonstrations. Yet, in spite of the peacefulness and tranquillity, unseen and unsuspected, Death lurked in the background.

Firing point on the new Running-Deer Range

The special attractions arranged for the day began with a demonstration of the Cutts Compensator by Col. R. M. Cutts and his son, Lieutenant Cutts, both of the Marine Corps. The two weapons used in this demonstration were the Thompson sub-machine gun and the .30-caliber Browning automatic rifle, with which our troops are equipped. The Model 1903 Springfield rifle was also employed to demonstrate in a special manner the reduction in recoil and "climb" through the action of the compensator.

Colonel Cutts' demonstration opened with the firing, by the Colonel, of a Thompson sub-machine gun, using tracer ammunition. This weapon is essentially a short-range one, with low projectile velocity and high trajectory. These two latter characteristics were brought out very clearly by the tracer bullets, the firing being at 600 yards. The tracer bullets, as seen in flight, resemble small red-hot coals of fire and can be seen perfectly even in the brightest daylight.

Next Colonel Cutts demonstrated the manner in which the Browning automatic rifle would be used in subduing a hostile machine-gun nest. Several target numbers were removed from the 600-yard butts, and the bare space designated as the machine-gun nest. A few shots with .30-06 tracer ammunition quickly established the range, after which the two Browning rifles proceeded to put down a heavy fire on the hostile area. Semi-automatic fire only was employed here; but the rapidity of fire of the two guns and the certainty with which the bullets found their mark were quite impressive. Equally impressive were the flatness of the trajectory and the speed with which the bullets covered that 600-yard range. And the height to which ricocheting bullets rose, as clearly shown by the tracer ammunition, was surprising.

Various other kinds of fire with the compensator-equipped Browning rifles were demonstrated, the rifle in one instance being fired offhand from the shoulder, and operating full automatic, with no tendency to climb being observed, and with no apparent discomfort to the firer.

Following Colonel Cutts' demonstration the great crowd, gathered on the side lines, was given a rare treat in the form of an exhibition of fancy shooting by Capt. A. H. Hardy, the famous expert shot and representative of the Peters Cartridge Co. Captain Hardy opened his performance by shooting, with a .38 Special revolver, at a silhouette man target at 300 yards. With the variable cross wind blowing it seemed incredible that any hits could be made at all at that range with only a revolver, held in one hand and giving a velocity of but 860 foot-seconds at the muzzle. The odds were strongly against Captain Hardy, who stated that such shooting should be done only on an absolutely calm day. Yet the Captain went through with it, and actually scored four hits out of nine shots at this 300-yard range.

Captain Hardy then showed how two Blue Rock targets, one stationary and one swinging, could be broken, simultaneously, by using a revolver in each hand. And should any one consider this an easy feat to perform they have only to try it to learn otherwise. This shooting was done at about 15 yards.

Many other interesting stunts followed, such as hitting small-sized steel washers thrown into the air, both .22 and .32-20-caliber rifles being used, the latter with the new high-speed ammunition; bursting apples thrown into the air, using the .32-20; shattering quartered bricks in the air with a .30-30; hitting five

Blue Rock targets thrown into the air simultaneously, a repeating shotgun being used for the purpose. One particularly difficult stunt Captain Hardy performed was to eject a .22 cartridge from a slide-action repeating rifle, and then hit this cartridge with the next shot before it reached the ground. A gallon can thrown about 20 feet into the air was hit five times before it reached the earth, a slide-action .22-caliber rifle being used.

Captain Hardy was assisted by "Fitz," of the

Col. R. J. Birdwhistle (left), of Canada, arrives in camp, and is greeted by Frank Kahrs

Colt company, and Sgt. R. J. Nowka, of the Los Angeles Police Team, of which Captain Hardy was coach. Fitz undertook to hold a card edgewise for Hardy to split with a .22 rifle bullet, but instead the Captain trimmed Fitz's cigar. Afterward the card was split, at about 15 yards. A number of other interesting feats were performed, such as, with the back turned to the target and holding a .38 Special revolver on top of the head and aiming with the aid of a mirror, breaking a Blue Rock target at about 15 yards.

No demonstration of Captain Hardy's would be complete without the one in which he outlines the profile of an Indian on a sheet of tin, using a .22-caliber repeating rifle. The Indian's head, bedecked in feathers, was outlined faultlessly, and in an incredibly short length of time.

It was believed that some information concerning the guns used by Captain Hardy would interest the readers of this magazine, and the genial Captain was visited in his shack on Commercial Row, and was only too ready to give any desired information, interspersing this with accounts of experiences and early life out on the Western frontier. Captain Hardy has three handguns, two of which are 6-inch Colt Officers' models, the other being a Camp Perry model. The trigger on one of the Officers' models is adjusted to 3½ pounds, while that on the other is lightened to 2½ pounds. This latter gun Captain Hardy uses in his left hand when shooting simultaneously at a stationary and a moving target. The left-hand gun is trained upon the stationary target, while the mind is concentrated upon the right-hand gun and the moving target. As the right-hand gun is deliberately fired the left-hand one, with the light trigger pull, is simultaneously discharged without thought or attention.

In .22-caliber rifles Captain Hardy uses a Model 90 Winchester slide-action, and the lever-action Marlin. Then there is a .32-20 Marlin slide-action, a .30-30 Marlin lever-action and a 12-gauge hammerless Marlin pump gun. Captain Hardy stated that back in the early days he and Mr. Marlin were close personal friends. For this reason he, the Captain, began using Marlin guns, and has been using them ever since. For the rifles the Captain prefers, as sights, the No. 1 Lyman rear with small aperture removed, and the No. 3 Lyman ivory bead front sight. However, he can shoot with open sights, too, two of the rifles being equipped with these sights. Captain Hardy's demonstration created a great deal of interest, and Colonel Myers has asked the Captain to give frequent performances during the matches next year.

The program for Sunday afternoon called for an airplane demonstration. A pursuit squadron of the Regular Air Force came down from Selfridge Field, with three heavy bombing planes from Langley Field. The performance began, at 1:30 p. m., by the pursuit planes making an attack with machine guns upon two targets anchored some 300 yards or so from shore, back of the 600-yard butts. The planes circled around over the land, and then, swooping down, rushed for the targets and opened fire with the machine guns. The shooting was very good, the targets being riddled with bullets each time.

After the machine-gun demonstration the planes circled around over the shore line, where the crowd had gathered, and each time they came around they dove down close to the water, with engines roaring, attaining a speed estimated to be in the neighborhood of 275 miles an hour, and then soared upward again. They had circled in this manner a number of times, amazing the spectators with the speed, and with the skill with which the planes were handled, when the squadron diving down again, one of the planes failed to recover, and crashed headlong into the lake not 200 yards from shore. The pilot, Lieut. J. C. Soper, of Gregory, Mich., was killed in the accident.

This sad occurrence cast gloom over the day and delayed for a time the remainder of the demonstration, which consisted of the laying of a smoke screen by two pursuit planes, and the dropping of a number of 300-pound demolition bombs, a mile or so out in the lake, by the bombing planes.

On this same Sunday, September 9, there was fired the famous Dewar Match and the International Railway Men's Match.

The Dewar Match was scheduled to begin at 8 a. m. Sunday morning, but due to a delay in connection with the targets the actual shooting did not commence until about half an hour later. The day was just about perfect—not a cloud to be seen in the sky anywhere. The light was very uniform from the beginning until the end of the match. Due to the fact that the shooting was delayed at the start, the last relay had the sunlight coming in over the left when they shot, which made it more difficult for them than for the others, who had the sun at their backs, the shooting being toward the west. It is believed that had the shooting commenced an hour earlier in the day the score, phenomenal as it was, would have been still higher, as the last relay would then have had as good light conditions as the others.

During the match there prevailed a light wind from about 11 o'clock; but this was very light, as well as very steady, and did not present any real problem for the shooters.

The shooting was very uniform and consistent throughout the entire match. It was evident that everything possible had been done to bring out the best that was in the men, the guns and the ammunition. The splendid grouping, and the fact that each shot performed perfectly, showed that each gun had been fitted with its own best make of ammunition, much credit for which should go to Mr. L. P. Castaldini, of Springfield Armory, who had charge of the machine rest, to which, besides the members of the Dewar Team, most of the other small-borers in camp took their rifles to be fitted with ammunition.

After careful thought and deliberation there had been chosen as captain for this year's Dewar Team Col. W. A. Tewes, of the Peters Cartridge Co.; and it was felt that there was no man in the country better qualified to lead the team to another victory than Colonel Tewes, and sharing with him the honors of victory, was Col. Basil Middleton, military instructor at Culver Military Academy, where the work of Colonel Middleton in developing rifle practice needs no comment here, he has been responsible for the building of the finest indoor range in America today. In this year's Dewar Match a coach had been appointed for each firing point—seven coaches in all. These men had been selected because of their experience and proven ability. Not one of them was a shooting member of the team, and therefore none of them had anything on his mind other than the proper coaching of his shooter.

The target detail was very well trained, and changed targets on the run, which operation required not over ten seconds. Everything about the match worked smoothly, with nothing to ruffle, confuse or upset the shooters; and nothing occurred throughout the match to mar the smoothness and harmony. Back of the firing line was gathered a large and enthusiastic audience, with many spotting scopes in use; and in the last relay it was evident from the tenseness and on the faces of these people that a world's record was expected. These expectations proved to have been well founded—7,881, with England's score 7,865—some shooting! Considering the fact that each side fired 800 shots it is indeed remarkable that there was a difference of but 16 points between the two team totals, which clearly shows that there was little to choose between the two teams as regards equipment and marksmanship. The fact that the winning team dropped but 119 points out of a total of 8,000 is also very impressive.

One member of the Dewar Team—F. J. Paffe—was a member also of the International Railway Rifle Team. This was but his second year at Perry, which gives an idea as to the class of riflemen to be found in the railway teams. Paffe was high individual on the International Railway Team.

Particularly impressive this year was the fact that three shooting members and one alternate on the Dewar Team were recruited from the ranks of the Junior Rifle Corps; while still another man, Renshaw, was a graduate of the Corps. A thing of this kind speaks eloquently, and does more to prove the very real advantages of membership in the Junior Rifle Corps than any amount of talking and advertising. One of these Juniors, young Lawrence Wilkens, aged 16, who was runner-up, shot the wonderful score of 397. His groups showed fine holding; and those points he lost were just outside of the 10-ring. Young D. S. McDougal, also 16 years old, and a member of the Corps, placed sixth, with a perfect score at 50 yards.

Always of interest to riflemen in connection with an important match of this kind is information concerning the rifles and ammunition of the individual shooters. This is given as follows:

This was the second year of the International Railway Rifle Match, which had been launched by that tireless worker and enthusiast, E. M. Farris, of Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1927, Farris himself shooting on the team both times. There were three entries in this match this year: England, Canada and the United States, Canada having come in this year for the first time. The winning score that the U. S. A. piled up last year was 7,696, to England's 7,580. The high man on the United States team last year was Z. E. Fraley, with a score of 393, while F. J. Paffe, of St. Augustine, Fla., gave the team its high score of 395 this year, this score being but three points below the high individual score of this year's Dewar team. The team's low score last year was 369, and the low score this year, 377.

The new Small-Bore Range was a busy place

Without doubt one of the reasons for the consistently better shooting of the team this year was due to the fact that every man on the team spent three or more days in camp, the time previous to the actual shooting of the match having been devoted to practice. It is not possible for a team to arrive in Camp in the eleventh hour before a match and then proceed to do their best work in that match. The different members of the team must become accustomed to shooting together as a team; and they must also become accustomed to the range on which they are going to shoot the match. Sentiment is in favor of next year's team coming to camp quite a number of days before the date scheduled for the shooting of the match; and, judging from the spirit of the men, there appears to be little doubt that this will be done.

The Railway Team this year was captained by E. M. Farris, with that veteran rifleman, Frank J. Kahrs, as team coach, assisted by R. H. McGarity, J. E. Miller and V. Z. Canfield; and a full measure of credit for the high scoring in the match must go to the earnest and ceaseless efforts of these men.

There were eleven railroads represented on this year's team, the Pennsylvania Railroad, as before, supplying the largest number of team members. It is expected that a larger number of American railroads will be represented next year, and that more teams from foreign countries will compete.

The actual shooting commenced at 2 o'clock, which was one hour later than schedule because of the targets having been lost. At the commencement of the match the sun was at about 10 o'clock, while at the finish it had gotten around to the 11:30 position. Tube sights, a few of which were in use, were the only ones well adapted to meeting this latter very unfavorable light condition. If next year's match is scheduled to be shot in the afternoon it is expected that tube sights will be very much in evidence. It is sincerely hoped, however, that it can be arranged to have this match shot in the morning, as is the Dewar Match, it being felt that the importance of the match justifies consideration in this respect.

About half of the men on this year's team were also on last year's team; and it is very evident that there is fine material in this year's team for high scoring in future matches. This International Railway Match should also prove to be a valuable feeder for the Dewar teams of the future.

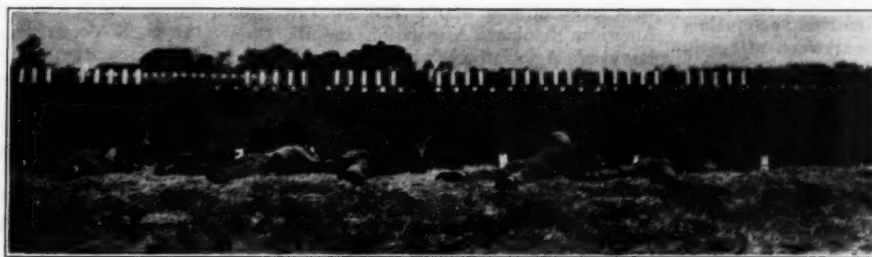

The American score, as shown in the bulletins published elsewhere in this issue, is 7,709. The Canadian score is 7,412, while that of England is not known at this writing. Throughout the match the wind was very variable, but of very low velocity, and constituted no great problem for the shooters.

One of the pleasant features in connection with this match, as well as with the Dewar, is the visit of Col. R. J. Birdwhistle, Secretary of the National Rifle Association of Canada, who acts as the official witness for both England and Canada.

Just as we are preparing to go to press a wire from E. M. Farris states that on September 23, the day scheduled for England to shoot this match, the Britishers hung up the remarkable score of 7,728, thereby winning the match. Hats off to our English cousins; all glory to them! Our boys shot well, but England shot better. THE AMERICAN RIFLEMAN extends to the railway riflemen of Great Britain its sincere congratulations. May the best team always win!

There were a number of interesting personalities present at Perry this year. For example, there was our friend Lester Quigley, the fighting postmaster of Manville, N. J., who was the subject of an editorial entitled, "Out To Win," which appeared in our March number. Mr. Quigley faces a very real and grave problem in defending the United States mails in his town, due to the large shipments of cash to meet the weekly pay rolls of the H. W. Johns-Manville Co., who have a large factory in the town. Mr. Quigley sincerely hopes that they may never be held up, but he is determined that in the event of such an occurrence he and his men shall be in a position to give a good and lasting account of themselves. With this in mind he is seeking out every bit of information which may be of possible assistance to him in meeting an attack from bandits, either singly or in gangs; and he was there at Perry to meet the seasoned firearms and police experts of the country and get their views in the matter. He is a born fighter, and is carrying on entirely on his own initiative, and with practically no encouragement or assistance, financially or otherwise, from the Government. More power to him. Would that the country had more of his kind.

Then there was Dr. J. L. Bastey, of Weymouth, Mass., the heart of the shoe-manufacturing industry and the home of radio broadcasting military bands. Last year Dr. Bastey, who is a pistol-shooting enthusiast, conceived the idea of bringing to Perry a team of policemen from his home town, to take the course in the Police School. Police from the larger cities have been attending Perry, but the doctor realized that it would be rather difficult to persuade the city officials of Weymouth that their 22-man police department ought to be represented. He accordingly laid out a campaign calculated to sell the idea to the powers that be. He selected four promising members of the police force and proceeded to coach them in pistol-shooting; and then, a few months ago, took them to Boston, where they defeated a team representing the 2,250-man force of that city. That put the big idea across, and a little further effort and salesmanship succeeded in securing a grant of $900 by the Weymouth Chamber of Commerce to send their team to Perry this year. These four men will pass on to the other members of their force what they have learned, not only about pistol-shooting but about every other subject covered in the Police School course. If Weymouth can do it, so can many another little community if they but possess the enterprise and initiative.

There turned up on the .22-caliber pistol range on Tuesday, September 4, a young lad, E. S. Carpenter by name, from the little village of Owls Head, N. Y. Carpenter was too timid to shoot in any of the matches, but in shooting for his skidoo medal at 50 yards he hung up the high score of 98, in the face of a 15-mile fish-tail wind swinging from 10 to 3 o'clock. The bold and confident man is not always the best shot at Perry.

Two other boys—J. L. Woodbury, of Joplin, Mo., and Charles Blenman, of Tucson, Ariz.—created considerable comment among veteran riflemen and instructors by making 47 x 50 at 600 yards in the N. R. A. Members' Match. In this match there were 1,042 entries, which were grouped into three classes: Regular Services, National Guard and Organized Reserves, and Civilian. Young Woodbury finished twenty-fourth, with Blenman twenty-fifth in the Civilian group, in which there were 381 entries, comprising some of the best civilian marksmen of nearly every State.

An example of pluck and devotion to the shooting game was furnished by D. F. Leonard, of Roswell, N. Mex. Leonard was at one time a soldier in the Philippines, where he lost his left hand. After being discharged from the Army he settled in New Mexico. Life here out in the open made him long to handle a rifle once more; and, undaunted, he contrived an ingenious slot and key device to take the place of the missing left hand. Leonard came to the matches this year and took his place on the .30-caliber firing line in competition with 3,000 of the best shots in the United States, Hawaii and Cuba. Like the call of the sea, the love of a rifle, once awakened, never wholly dies.

A handsome new trophy has been provided this year, to be awarded annually to the winning team in the Police Pistol Team Match. There is a story in connection with this trophy which runs as follows: Colonel Myers, Executive Officer of the National Matches, directed Captain Althouse, of the Publicity Department at Camp Perry, to go out and obtain a trophy, somewhere, for the Police Team Match. Captain Althouse went to Cleveland and approached, in turn, the American Bankers' Association and the Ohio Bankers' Association, with the proposition that they donate a trophy for the above match. These two associations, however, were not interested. Captain Althouse then called upon Inspector W. Joseph Delehaunty, of the Toledo Police Department. Through the interest and efforts of Inspector Delehaunty a handsome trophy was donated by Mr. Louis Sobel, of the Home Furnishing Co., of Toledo. This trophy will be in the form of a bronze statue, 24 inches high, of a Toledo police officer in the act of drawing his pistol. The statue will be mounted upon an 8-inch base. Mr. Sobel was a first lieutenant of Infantry in the 91st Division during the World War. He states that he is not particularly interested at the present time in soldier marksmanship, but that police marksmanship comes right to his front door, and that he will do anything within his power to further it.

Inspector Delehaunty is now working to secure another trophy to be awarded to the best individual police shot at the matches each year. The Inspector has been with the Toledo Police Department for twenty-five years, and was the moving spirit in securing for Toledo one of the best-equipped police pistol ranges and finest clubhouses in the country today.

There is an interesting little story as to how the Pasadena Police Team managed to get to Perry this year. The business men of the city had been approached with the proposition of sending a police team to the matches, not only to compete in the matches themselves, but principally to take the practical course of instruction in the Police School. The verdict was, however, that there "was no money." The situation appeared to be quite hopeless; yet Fate had decided that a police team from Pasadena was to go to Perry.

Shortly before it was time to leave for the matches, two bandits, D. Hendon and R. Peltier, of Long Beach and Los Angeles, respectively, held up the First National Bank of Pasadena, and took $6,371. The Pasadena police were very much on the job, however, and just forty-two minutes after the show began, one of the bandits was dead, the other was in jail, and the money recovered. The bandits put up a stiff running fight, one of them shooting from the car with a .30-30 rifle. The policemen covered themselves with glory, several being wounded, one of them having to be taken out of the fight and carried to the hospital.

That settled it. The business men of Pasadena quickly raised $2,000, and two days after the fight the Pasadena Police Team was on its way to Perry!

Throughout the matches this year the Fox Movietone people had an outfit in camp taking "talking pictures" of the multitudinous activities going on. For the first time in the history of photography it will be possible to see a moving picture of a firing line in action, and actually hear the shots as they are fired. Among other things the Movietone outfit photographed all the trophies grouped together on a bench outdoors, during which Colonel Rumsey, President of the N. R. A., made a brief address, followed by presentation by Colonel Rumsey of the trophy to the winner of the Wimbledon Match, Sgt. Morris Fisher, of the Marine Corps. These pictures will be shown in every Movietone and Vitaphone theater in the country.

Not all of the good shooting this year was done by the men and boys. There were more women on the firing line during these matches than had ever been seen there before, and some of these made the men bustle. There was Mrs. Edward A. McGoldrick, of Spokane, Wash., who completed the course in the Small-Arms Firing School, and who last year won the Ladies' Handicap Championship of the Washington Amateur Trap Shooters' Association. Taking her place on the firing line at Perry this year, Mrs. McGoldrick hung up a score of 48 x 50 at 300 yards. She weighs only 100 pounds, but has no fear of the service Springfield and M1 ammunition.

Another female enthusiast is Mrs. John H. Young, of Portland, Oreg., wife of a police sergeant. Mrs. Young is an expert with the police revolver, and before leaving her home to attend the matches she won the Oregon State Pistol Championship for women, defeating some of Oregon's best marksmen at the same time.

The schedule this year was rather crowded, due to the shorter period of the matches. As a consequence there were fewer entries in the different matches than there would otherwise have been because of the fact that the shooters simply could not get into all of the matches each day for lack of time. The greatly increased length of the firing line this year was also a contributing factor in this connection, more time being required to get about the range.

One of the never-failing attractions at Perry each year is "Commercial Row." Here, in the different shacks along the row, the various arms, ammunition and accessories companies hold forth, having on display and for sale their various products. Each year certain new guns, ammunition and items of equipment are sure to be in evidence, and these always create the greatest interest and call forth a rapid fire of comments and questions from the different members of the shooting fraternity, who take to Commercial Row as a duck takes to water, and crowd the shacks to overflowing, especially in the evenings between supper and bed time. Here the experts in the various lines are to be found, and they are always ready to answer all questions and give all information at their command. "The Row" is, indeed, the gun crank's paradise; and to many the evenings spent in the different shacks are actually enjoyed more than any other feature in connection with the matches.

No shooting event of National scope and magnitude would be complete without the cheery, smiling face of Paddy O'Hare. Paddy's shack is not right on official Commercial Row, but it is on the main street in Camp, and you pass it after leaving the Registration Tent; and it is one of the pleasantest features of the matches to stop for a brief chat with Paddy on your way into Camp, and hear his cordial, "Well, how is everything?"

Coming to Commercial Row proper we find, at the upper end, an extensive and varied exhibit by du Pont. The exhibit itself was in one of the regular Commercial Row shacks; but about 50 yards away a tent had been set up, and in this were installed two complete Delcolite lighting sets. One of these was a new 32-volt 4-cylinder outfit to be placed upon the market this fall. This was used to furnish the current for lighting the du Pont shack and for operating a Frigid-aire water cooler outside of the building; and it may be remarked in passing that this unfailing source of cool drinking water in Camp made a big hit with the boys, especially during the frequent hot days which occurred throughout the matches. The other Delcolite outfit was the regular type so well known. This was a 110-volt set and supplied current for the outdoor moving pictures which provided entertainment practically every night during the three-week period. It is estimated that the total number of spectators at these pictures was in the neighborhood of 10,000.

The du Pont exhibit was in charge of Maj. L. W. T. Waller, so well known to all riflemen, assisted by ten du Pont representatives assembled from all parts of this country and Canada, and from various different fields of activity. The exhibit itself was very interesting, the shack being well lighted at night by the 32-volt Delcolite outfit, special wiring with an ample number of outlets having been installed by the du Pont representatives. Beautiful pictures of game and outdoor scenes graced the shack walls, while on tables and benches were displayed some of the varied products of the different du Pont factories. Beginning at the door of the shack, and working around in a clockwise direction one encountered safety films for moving pictures; samples of artificial silk made from spruce; a display of a thin, transparent, celluloid-like substance in sheets of various colors, called "Cellophane," and used for wrapping foodstuffs; the material, however, being much less inflammable than regular celluloid; beautiful new toilet sets in attractive colors and made from a material called "Lucite." Returning along the other side of the shack one encountered, first, samples of commercial high explosives and smokeless rifle powders; then a sawed-off pressure gun. There were also samples of Tontine window shades and Fabricoid fabric, while photographs of the various activities of the du Pont ballistic laboratories were of special interest to the rifle crank. Mr. John Taylor was on hand at all times to answer questions on ballistic subjects.

Ensign S. C. Linholm, Captain of the Coast Guard Rifle Team. This was the first year the Coast Guard had a team at Perry

The Peters Cartridge Co. was represented by Col. W. A. Tewes and Capt. A. H. Hardy, assisted by Mr. H. E. Anderson. "Hap" Holaday, with his ready smile, was on hand the first week, but due to sickness at home was obliged to leave and did not return, to the disappointment of his many friends. The Peters exhibit included a complete line of all cartridges made by the Peters company (in dummy form), with displays showing the different ammunition components cut in section and in various stages of manufacture. Anyone wishing to learn something of the details of modern ammunition manufacture could do so here, with the aid of the clear explanations by Colonel Tewes, who was in charge of all Peters business. Besides the exhibit of the ammunition itself there were displayed on the shack walls spark photographs of ammunition in action, taken by Dr. P. P. Quayle, of the Peters Cartridge Co. Mr. John Wallace, vice president of the company, flew up from Cincinnati in a airplane, remaining in Camp three days. Colonel Tewes captained to victory this year's Dewar Team, while Captain Hardy coached the winning Los Angeles Police Team.

The United States Cartridge Co. was again represented on the Row by Col. J. J. Dooley, assisted by Mr. Marvel Olsen, well-known artist and member of the U. S. Cartridge advertising staff. This was Mr. Olsen's first year at Perry, and he expressed himself as having had a very interesting and enjoyable three weeks. We shall look for him next year. In addition to the very complete exhibit of United States ammunition, the shack was decorated with some very effective advertising posters. These were in the form of game animals and birds, life size; and they lent an atmosphere of the great outdoors—of wind-swept marshes and far-northern hunting fields. Besides representing United States Cartridge at the matches, Colonel Dooley also had charge of the ammunition tent for all ordnance issued on the range, being assisted by Capt. Warren D. Davis, Field Artillery, D. O. L.

The Western Cartridge Co. was again represented in Camp by Roy Riggs. The company had on display in their shack on Commercial Row their full line of modern, up-to-date ammunition, in both target and hunting varieties. The walls of the shack were decorated with many beautiful photographs of wilderness hunting scenes in which the animals pictured had been killed with Western ammunition. There was again on-hand in the Western shack a supply of the two valuable and interesting booklets, "Rifle and Pistol Ammunition Handbook" and "American Big Game Hunting," the latter by Colonel Whelen. These were revised editions of the same books available at Perry last year. They were given away free of charge, and contain much valuable dope for the gun crank and hunter.

The Lyman Gun Sight Corporation was represented by Seth Wiard and L. M. Ahlberg. C. A. Pickering, mechanical expert, was in Camp the first week, but due to pressure of business back in the plant he could not stay longer, to the regret of his friends. Henry Lyman himself dropped in at the beginning of the second week, but was able to remain only two or three days because of urgent business matters at home. The Lyman exhibit comprised a full line of Lyman sights and Ideal reloading tools, with canisters of some of the rifle powders most used by the hand-loaders. The company announces the taking over of the entire telescope-sight business of the Stevens Arms Co., as well as the telescope-sight business of the Winchester company. Interesting developments may be expected in the future, though the company wishes it definitely known that they are not yet in a position to fill any orders for, or render any service on, either of these sights, and that they will not be for some little time to come. When the telescope-sight department has become completely organized and is prepared to function in a normal manner this fact will be announced by the Lyman company in the columns of this magazine. The same remarks apply also to the Garand high-speed firing mechanism, the manufacturing rights for which have been secured by Lyman. When the company is in a position to accept orders for, and render service on, this device, this fact will be made known.

In the Lyman shack Col. R. M. Cutts and his son, Lieutenant Cutts, had an exhibit of the Cutts Compensator, which attracted widespread attention. Various types of firearms equipped with the Compensator were on display, as well as a considerable number of Compensators of different types for different arms, with some special ones designed to show the principles of action of the device and some of the various stages of its development. Spark photographs by Dr. Quayle, of the Peters Cartridge Co., as well as some actual patterns, gave an idea of the effect of the Compensator upon the shot charge in a 12-gauge shotgun.

Coming down Commercial Row we find ourselves in front of a shack bearing the names, "Hart Arms Company" and "Schmitt Reloading Tools." Entering the building we observe a big, husky, black-haired chap with a sincere, honest face, talking earnestly to a group of men of all ages crowded about a temporary bench set up in the shack. It is C. V. Schmitt, of Minneapolis; and on the bench he has installed his two reloading tools. Schmitt's slogan is "speed with accuracy; less time reloading and more time shooting." He proves his claim for speed by taking a fired case, right from the gun, quickly placing it in one of the machines, and with one swift back-and-forth stroke of a lever, making that case ready for the powder charge. As regards accuracy, Schmitt calls attention to the fact that the special ammunition used by E. O. Swanson in winning the N. R. A. Free-Rifle Match was loaded by Swanson himself with a Schmitt reloading tool. Schmitt states that the workmanship and accuracy employed in the manufacture of his loading tools are of a very high order, and an examination of the tools themselves shows this to be indeed a fact.

Back in the shack a little way we see a crowd of men gathered, absorbed, before another bench stretching crosswise of the building. On the bench are a dozen or so special custom-built rifles of various calibers. One or two of them are target rifles; all the others are sporters—restocked, re-barreled, resighted Springfields and Mausers. They are of different weights, stock dimensions and barrel lengths; and the different guns carry different sight equipment, one or two being equipped with hunting telescopes. The workmanship on every detail of the rifles is very fine; some of the arms are worked down very light. It is the exhibit of the Hart Arms Co., of Cleveland. Back of the bench stands A. E. Hart, head of the company, striving nobly to keep ahead of the rapid-fire string of questions being shot at him from all sides. "Anything in the gun line," we hear him say; "special stocks, special barrels, scope sights mounted—anything at all." Lying on the bench amid the guns is what at first appears to be a rather cumbersome pistol. Picking it up one finds that it is the action, with barrel cut off to about 8 inches and stock cut off at the pistol grip, of a Winchester 52. Part of the stock on the left-hand side is cut away to show the installation of the Hart speed action. By cocking and snapping this "pistol" one can get a clear idea of what this Hart speed action accomplishes. Hart also had on one of the sporters a patented fitting for attaching a No. 1 Lyman sight to the sleeve of bolt-action rifles without any looseness or wobble.

The Sigmund Eisner Co., of Red Bank, N. J., were well established on the Row with a plentiful supply of military and general outdoor clothing. At that they were sold out on a number of items after the first few cold days in camp, and had to wire for more.

The Associated Military Stores, of Chicago, were also on hand with a supply of military uniforms and accessories—belts, hat cords, spurs, etc., and appeared to be doing a good business.

The Winchester affairs were again in charge of "Tom" Davis, assisted by "Cap" Richard and Henry Gussman. Gussman is the man to whom all owners of Winchester rifles at Perry turn for such tuning up and adjustments to their guns as their own particular fancies may dictate. V. E. Rosine and M. A. Robinson, of the Winchester factory, visited camp and spent two or three days on the firing line.

A rack containing a dozen of more of the most popular models of Winchester arms was set up in the Winchester shack, the two guns attracting the most interest being a special heavy-barrel Model 52 rifle and a heavy-barrel 54, though all of the guns were freely handled by the crowds visiting the shack. There was also on hand the new Model 58 Winchester rifle, a little single-shot bolt-action .22 made for boys, and the latest addition to the Winchester line. Winchester also had on display an attractive line of flashlights and fishing rods. The flashlights were special deluxe models in fancy boxes, intended for Christmas suggestions.

The Remington shack as usual was popular, with Frank Kahrs at the wheel, assisted by Ralph McGarrity and A. J. Thill. One always expects to see plenty of guns when he visits Remington headquarters at Perry, and there was no cause for disappointment. Not only was the bench across the back of the shack covered with Remington guns of all types and models, but racks were set up to accommodate still more guns. Also the new Kleanbore center-fire ammunition in various calibers was on display and for sale.

Remington also had on exhibit one of Arthur Hubalek's machine rests, which are largely used for testing out small-bore rifles to determine the most accurate ammunition for any particular gun. This is a neat, compact device which can be fastened to the top of any stout bench, and it aroused considerable interest among the shooters. Remington also took charge of the distribution of the books published by the Small-Arms Technical Publishing Co., there being on hand all the books published to date by this company, including Clyde Baker's new "Modern Gunsmithing." The latest Remington posters and calendars were attractively displayed about the interior of the shack.

This year, for the first time since 1922, the Savage Arms Corporation held forth at Perry. They arrived at the beginning of things and stayed throughout the entire three-week period. W. B. Wilsey, service manager of the company, was in charge, while W. D. Higgins, assistant sales manager, was able to break away from his office to spend three days in camp. It was a disappointment to many that he could not stay longer. The Savage shack was popular from the very start. Some little slide-action, spring-operated guns of Savage extraction and known as "Playrifles," resembling air rifles but shooting quarter-inch balls of Bakelite, were on hand for the younger members in Camp, who crowded about the "firing line" of the toy range and tried to get the balls "into the black" on an ingenious carboard target, so made that it caught all balls that struck it and prevented their being scattered all over the shack. Even at that it kept Wilsey busy gathering up the pellets when an important "match" happened to be in progress—which was frequently the case.

With the younger element busy with the toy guns the older members had a bit more room to crowd about the long bench on which were displayed the various Savage guns. The crowd showed an interest in all of these; but the one gun which invariably captured the attention of every man who came into the Savage shack was the new Savage Super-Sporter rifle. It was on hand in both of the models in which it is made up, and in its four different calibers. The gun is well stocked and well finished, and it seemed as if the boys just couldn't keep their hands off it.

In addition to the Savage arms some of the best-known Stevens guns were on hand also, including rifles, pistols and shotguns. Of special interest was the new Model 28 Stevens repeating shotgun, which, while possessing the same general outside appearance as the older Model 21 gun, incorporates in the mechanism numerous improvements.

The Colt headquarters are always well patronized. There is only one "Fitz" at Perry. During the day he is kept very busy on the firing lines, tuning up the Colt guns of the shooters to meet the many special ideas and requirements—real or imagined—of the users; but at night Fitz is the genial host, and has a smile and ready welcome for all who visit Colt headquarters, answering all questions put to him, and giving rare and seasoned advice and suggestions to those seeking them.

"Gene" Mitchell was in charge of all Colt business at Perry this year, and was one of the busiest men in camp, working hard out on the firing lines during the day, and answering questions and selling Colt guns at night. Mr. Mitchell was assisted by Mr. H. M. Webster, who came on ahead and had things lined up and running smoothly by the time Mitchell arrived. Mr. S. W. Dimick, small-arms sales manager of the Colt company, also visited Camp for a few days toward the end of the matches.

Besides the regular well-known line of Colt guns with which every handgun user is familiar, there were on display, and in use on the firing line this year, two new Colts which attracted widespread interest. One was the new Super-Colt, an automatic pistol which on the outside is an exact duplicate of the .45 Government arm, but which is built to handle the regular .38 Colt automatic cartridge, which cartridge is noted for its very high velocity and great penetration. There has developed a great demand for a thoroughly modern pistol to handle this splendid cartridge, and the new gun has been brought out to satisfy this demand. It will be placed upon the market about January 1.

The other new Colt gun was a .22-caliber automatic arm, which, again, exactly resembles the .45 Government automatic on the outside. It was built to handle regular .22-caliber long-rifle ammunition, and the boys who used it on the firing line reported that it performed just as satisfactorily as any other Colt automatic pistol. In line with the established Colt policy this gun was first submitted to the Government before any plans were made to place it upon the market commercially. Just when it may be commercially available depends in a large measure upon the actual demand which is made upon Colt for the pistol.

J. W. Fecker had a representative in Camp to demonstrate the Fecker telescope sights and Precision mounts, though Mr. Fecker himself could not spare the time to visit Perry this year. The representative brought with him a supply of scopes and mounts, with some scopes sectionalized longitudinally to show the sturdy, permanent construction. Facilities were available for making adjustments to any Fecker scopes should these at any time be necessary.

Last, but by no means least, we come to the Springfield Armory exhibit, located in the fourth building on Commercial Row. Here were gathered "Al" Woodworth and W. L. Gibson, of Springfield Armory, to answer the countless questions of the many visitors each day, while hidden away behind the scenes were J. A. Barry and his assistant, busily engaged from morning until night making repairs and adjustments to the Springfield rifles used out on the firing line. Whether or not these adjustments were always necessary or advisable mattered not at all. Any rifle brought in was promptly taken down and gone over; and when returned to its shooter it was in as nearly perfect condition as human skill and ingenuity could make it.

L. P. Castaldini, of Springfield Armory, was on hand to operate the small-bore machine rest, while George Schneering, proof-house superintendent at Frankford Arsenal, was also in camp.

The Ordnance exhibit was most interesting and highly instructive. There were on hand .30-caliber Browning and Vickers machine guns, such as were used during the war; and also a .50-caliber Browning anti-aircraft and anti-tank machine gun. The gun was in the anti-aircraft mount. On tables along the walls were cases containing small-arms ammunition of various types and in various stages of manufacture. Complete cartridges were shown sectionalized, as were also the different types of bullets, including tracer, armor-piercing and explosive bullets. A case with glass doors contained the various different models of Springfield rifles—Regular Service, National Match, Sporter, heavy-barreled free-rifle, M1 .22-caliber, and the new Model T1E1 .22-caliber arm. This latter rifle embodies several improvements over the M1, which it will eventually supersede, though when this will come about is not definitely known.

On a table toward the back of the shack were displayed the different automatic rifles with which our Government has been experimenting—the Browning, Thompson, Garand and the Pedersen, the latter built to handle the new .276-caliber cartridge. Another exhibit contained all of the different parts that go to make up the Springfield rifle, while numerous photographs of actual operations being carried on in the shops at Springfield gave some idea of the many different and complex processes involved in the manufacture of these parts.

One of the matches of the most general interest at Perry this year, because of its spectacular nature, was the Infantry Combat Match, fired Saturday, September 8. This match, which had become more or less complicated in recent years, went back this year to the principles of the old Evans match, in which the different teams of the three classifications—Regular Service, National Guard and Civilian—are paired together against each other in competition, the members of opposing teams proceeding to "shoot down" their opponents by scoring hits on targets bearing numbers corresponding to numbers pinned on the backs of the different members of the "enemy" team. Every time any target is hit, the man bearing the same number as that of the target is immediately withdrawn from the match by the umpire, and the target does not again appear. In this way one team after another is each classification is eliminated until there remains but one Service team, one National Guard team and one Civilian team.

Forty rounds of ammunition are issued to each man. Firing begins at 1,000 yards and is conducted by command of each team captain while targets are exposed. The time of exposure of the targets is not known to competitors, being controlled in the pit. While targets are down teams advance by command of the range officer conducting the match. At each halt the team captains give the range to their men, followed by the proper order to fire. Every time a target is hit the opposing team loses a man, with his unexpended ammunition. Any firing position is used, down to a range of 200 yards, at which range marching fire is taken up. Each run is continued until either one team has lost all of its men or both teams have exhausted their ammunition. In the first case the team not having lost all of its men wins. In the second case the team losing the fewer number of men is the winner.

Anticipating something exciting, the crowd gathered back of the firing line. Saturday was a beautiful day—bright and clear, with an average temperature of about 70 degrees, and a light, variable wind swinging from 6 o'clock in the morning to 8 o'clock in the afternoon. Twenty-nine teams entered the match; and as one by one the different ones were gradually eliminated the excitement ran high. Finally the Navy team had accounted for all the other Service teams, and was patiently awaiting a foe worthy of her metal. Oregon had in the meanwhile disposed of the other Civilian teams, while in the National Guard group New York reigned supreme.

There was a draw to see who should take who. Oregon passed, and New York and Navy locked horns. Navy finally went under; and, at last, New York and Oregon faced each other for the championship of the match.

Shortly after the start New York "got" four of the Oregonians, but then for a while was unable to get any more. Slowly Oregon wiped out this lead, until the casualties stood four to four. Then for a while it was a seesaw affair, first one side getting a man, then the other. This continued until, at about the 500-yard point, New York had two men left and Oregon but one.

The excitement rose to a high pitch. The spectators stood up on the benches and cheered and yelled as if they had been witnessing a World's Series baseball game. Both New Yorkers feverishly hurled lead at the one lone Oregonian, who as feverishly hurled it back at them. The odds were too great, however. Even so, as he finally went under the plucky Oregonian took one of the New Yorkers with him for company. Two targets sank below the butts, leaving one in view to proclaim New York the winner.

This year for the first time a Skeet field was established at Perry, and the shooters were given an opportunity to try their skill with the shotgun on fast-moving targets at close range, and coming and going from all angles. Skeet has become very popular in the comparatively short time since it was first launched, for, unlike ordinary trap-shooting, Skeet develops in its devotees a type of skill in handling a shotgun which is of the greatest value in the game fields. In fact, Skeet was developed with the express idea of duplicating all of the shooting conditions met with in duck blind or stubble field.

The Skeet field at Perry was in charge of Willis O. C. Ellis, a director of the National

The Big Shoot Down By the Sea

By C. S. LANDIS

THE Thirty-fifth Annual Sea Girt Interstate Rifle Tournament was held on September 1 to 4, inclusive, on the famous New Jersey State Rifle Range. The meet comprised the usual military rifle competitions which have been well and favorably known to riflemen throughout the East for many years. Several hundred competitors shot through the .30-caliber events, most of the entrants being members of the various New Jersey National Guard units, although there were quite a number of civilian competitors, most of whom attended the tournament primarily to shoot in the .22-caliber matches.

In addition to the military rifle competitions there was a three-day small-bore shoot attended by 55 competitors, comprising a majority of the well-known rifle shots in all of the Middle Atlantic States. Nearly every well-known small-bore shooter between northern New York and Maryland was there excepting those from New England. For some odd reason there were no entries from Connecticut or Massachusetts.

The Sea Girt Small-Bore Tournament has now reached the point where it is nearly half as large as the Fourth of July Eastern Tournament, and attracts more first-class shots than attended the national match small-bore events of five or six years ago. It is a pretty good indication that small-bore shooting is becoming increasingly important and popular in this country when so many shooters take in the Sea Girt Tournament while the early events of the National Matches are in progress.

The weather on Saturday, September 1, was very pleasant and reasonably satisfactory for good scores. The 50-, 100- and 200-yard re-entry matches opened about 9 o'clock in the morning and continued throughout the day, except that the long range was closed to re-entries during the afternoon, when the Dryden, or Palma Small-Bore Individual Match, was scheduled. Quite a bit of wind blew in from the Atlantic and kept down the morning scores, so that only one possible was registered at 100 yards, and very few 99's. Shooting was easier on the 50-yard range, but at 200 only one shooter scored above 48.

In the afternoon conditions became more favorable, the wind dying down to a more reasonable velocity and becoming more even. The light changed around so that it fell on the targets, and the scores began to climb.

In the 150-yard stage of the Dryden, possibles were the order of the day and a number of the better shots made from 12 to 14 V's. At 175 yards conditions, of course, were a little more difficult, due to the greater range, but 75's still kept coming up on the score boards, and ten or twelve competitors finished the two ranges with clean scores. At 200 yards the shooting became more difficult. The wind was stronger and more uneven and there were frequent light changes, especially for the earlier squads. Two and eight o'clock 4's were chalked up rather frequently, and only three competitors went through with clean scores.

As General Spencer had ruled before the matches began that no V's would be counted at any range, so as to eliminate the usual Sea Girt squabbles about the deciding of ties, those who made clean scores at 200 yards kept on shooting until they missed the bull's-eye. The C-5 target was used, due to a shortage of Internationals. The 200-yard stage developed into a neck-and-neck race between George B. Sheldon and M. B. Stevens, both of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Stevens finally winning by a score of 225 plus 20 bulls. Sheldon had 225 plus 18 bulls, while Charlie German came through with 225 plus 6 bulls. Each received a gold medal. There were two 224's, and eight scores of 223. One of the latter contained 35 V's, but this was a lot of labor for nothing because the V's were not counted officially.

The big day of small-bore shooting was Sunday, September 2. This began with the short-range match at 50 yards, resulting in a five-way tie on 100 between Landis, Sittler, Moore, Hansen and Sheldon. Each of them scored 100. There were eleven 99's. The shoot-off was won by Sheldon, with another possible. This was put on after the 50-yard stage of the Sea Girt Championship, because it was necessary to score the targets before the shoot-offs could be held. In the short range and the championship, and shoot-off and the re-entry sighting targets for these competitions, Sheldon had a long run of 50 bull's-eyes, and Landis one of 22.

The Eisner was the next match on the program. This resulted in a triple tie between Samsøe, Hilborn and Stevens, each of whom scored a possible at 100 yards. There were three 99's. Stevens won after two shoot-offs, with Samsøe second. In this, as in the previous competition, V's were not counted in deciding the ties.

In the Eastern or Sea Girt Championship, 10 shots each at 50, 100 and 200 yards, there was a hot fight between Walter Kelsey, of Tarrytown, N. Y., Charlie Johnson, of Frankford Arsenal, Landis and Sheldon. Kelsey started off with a 99 at short range, and each of the other three had possibles. Stevens and Trull also had possibles. Shooting conditions were good at 50 yards and scores ran high. By the time the shooters got back to the second stage a 15- or 20-mile gale was blowing in from 1 o'clock, and shooting was very much more difficult. Kelsey had a possible, 9 shots well in the bull and 1 just touching the edge of the ten ring. Sheldon had a good 99, while Landis started off with six V's, and finished with the same total as Sheldon. Johnson, unfortunately, pulled an 8 and scored 97. Willners had a splendid possible, and so had Oswald, but neither started well enough at 50 yards. This left a triple tie at 199 between Kelsey, Sheldon and Landis. Johnson was three down, with L. J. Miller one ahead of him as a result of a pair of 99's. It was a tight race.

At the long range the wind became a little easier but more irregular. There were also frequent changes of light. Johnson finished with a possible, which gave him 247. Kelsey scored 48, giving him the same total. Miller dropped three, putting him out of the running. Stevens dropped one, with a 97 at 100 yards; total, 246. George Sittler also had 246, all of which narrowed the fight down to Sheldon and Landis, each of whom came through with 49, the Poughkeepsie shooter taking the tie on Creedmoor count. The first three in this competition received gold medals.

The Long-Range Individual was shot under ordinary weather conditions. The wind was irregular and fairly strong. There were no possibles, but Charlie Johnson and Willners of Frankford, each came through with 99, and George Borresen, of Washington, had the same total. There were six 98's. The 99's received gold medals.

The Swiss Match was shot under rather unfavorable conditions of wind and light. Long runs were difficult. It was a re-entry match, but on account of the heavy program on the second day the shooters' time was limited and most of them had only one or two scores.

I. W. Turner of Mt. Kisco was leading for some time with 10 bull's-eyes; but then Landis shot two tickets, getting 15 on the first and 20 on the second. George Borresen had 7 bull's-eyes, Colonel Martin 6, and Charlie St. John 4.

Windy weather drove a lot of the shooters down to the 50-yard re-entry. It was a hot fight. George Sittler scored three possibles and tied for first early in the shooting. Walter Kelsey then ran 30 straight. Stevens and Sheldon kept turning in 99's and possibles until each of them had four 100's. The result was a four-way tie on 300, the ties divided equally.

In the 100-yard re-entry George Sittler ran away from the field, due to most excellent shooting the first day. He scored the only possible and a 99. Samsøe and Stevens each had a 98 and a 99.

In the 200-yard re-entry no one made above 48 except Landis, who scored three possibles with his seven-year-old Winchester. I. W. Turner, who shot well through all of the 200-yard matches, was second.

The only team match on the program was another victory for Frankford Arsenal, their veteran organization, consisting of Miller, Johnson, Willners and Clarence Held, scoring 1,603 out of a highest possible total of 1,800 on the new International target. The Perth Amboy Rifle Club was second, three points in the rear. Len Miller made a total of 146 x 150 on the 2.4-inch 10-ring at 150 yards, which is some shooting. Samsoe, of Perth Amboy, had the best 200-yard group and scored 134. The high 175-yard total was 141, made by Willners and Hansen. This was an iron sight match.

The social features at the Sea Girt Shoot were up to the usual standard. We had two beautiful dog fights. The morning after the holding of the Small-Bore Championship a group of gentlemen went over to Manasquan and came back so thoroughly imbued with the spirit of the times that they put on a concert at 1 a. m., which included such classical selections as "Sweet Adeline," "Red Hot Mamma," and finally, "Hallelujah! I'm a Bum." You will notice that they improved as they went along.

Individual wins in the small-bore competitions were divided fairly evenly between Sheldon, Stevens, Landis, Johnson and Sittler, each of whom won or tied for first place in from two to four matches.

The attendance this year was so satisfactory that it is quite evident that the small-bore portion of future Sea Girt fall tournaments will be a most important part of the program.

MY EXPERIENCES WITH THE .270 WINCHESTER

By BYRON E. COTTRELL

THE first thing I read when I got the July issue of the RIFLEMAN was what that great rifleman, J. R. Mattern, had to say regarding the .270 Winchester; and if any of you have not read it let me suggest that you do so.

By actual experience I have found out that everything that Mattern has said regarding the .270 is true. All of the early reports of the .270 said that it was not as good as the .30-06 in any way. Some even went so far as to say that there was no excuse for it. Well, I always like to play with everything new in the gun line, so I ordered my Model 54 chambered for the .270.

The first thing that I found out was that it has just as good penetration in heavy bone and meat as the .30-06 180-grain load. This to my surprise, as I was not looking for such penetration. I have tried it on deer and tubercular cattle, and I will say that it is just as reliable as regards penetration as the .30-06.

Next I discovered that the .270 was just as accurate. The rifle that I had, and that my wife still has, will make groups of less than 2 inches at 100 yards—as good as I have ever seen done with the best Springfield.

Next I discovered that I could hit wood-checks at longer range than I could with the .30-06. After using the .270 for several years I came to the conclusion that it was a longer-range rifle—for practical hunting at least—than the .30-06. At 1,000 or 1,500 yards the .30-06 might outshoot it—and it might not! I would guess that it would; but the .270 has given me many surprises.

My present rifle is a Mauser prewar action, a Niedner .30-06 barrel, and a fine stock made by Tait. It is the finest rifle that I ever owned—but, I have just ordered me a new .270 Winchester with stainless barrel, and this is to be the rifle that I will do all my hunting with. Is there anything more that I could say of the .270?

ARE WE GOING TO TOLERATE MORE LAWS LIKE THIS?

THE New York Sunday World of August 5, cites a few more aspects of the working of the notorious Sullivan Law in actual practice, and quotes Justice Strong of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn. The Sunday World report reads:

JUDGE FREES GUN-TOTER, SCORES LAW

JUSTICE STRONG SAYS SULLIVAN ACT FAVORS CROOKS

GUISEPPE FLORINO of No. 138 Sackett Street, Brooklyn, who once spent several months in the death house and who was arrested July 11 for carrying a revolver, was discharged on a writ of habeas corpus yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Strong in Brooklyn.

In his decision Justice Strong said the Sullivan Law originally was enacted to protect one East Side gang and to prevent rival gangsters from obtaining revolvers.

"Ever since the enactment of the law," he added, "gangsters have all had pistols, either with or without permits, many of them obtaining permits through either political pull or deceit. While the gangster is either evading or violating the law, the householder or average citizen has been left unprotected, largely because the obtaining of a permit by him has been surrounded with annoyance or red tape. The police in New York City have for a long time refused to honor permits granted by Justices of Courts of Record."

Florino's discharge was based on a pistol permit signed by Judge William J. Tracey of Columbia County, which Justice Strong held valid. Florino said Judge Tracey granted him the permit when he was running a butcher shop at Hudson, N. Y. Justice Strong said the police are bound, as a matter of law, to honor such permits.

Florino has been arrested eleven times and discharged on all but two occasions. He was convicted of the murder of George Turello in 1920. After he had spent several months in the death house his conviction was reversed by the Court of Appeals. Later the indictment was dismissed. Four years ago he was sent to the workhouse for possessing a revolver. Justice Strong said Florino's almost invariable discharge leaves a question whether the bulk of the arrests were justified.

Regarding the International Matches

IT WAS intended to publish in this issue an account of the International Matches. We have been, however, very fortunate in being able to secure an article by Colonel McDougal himself, Captain of the U. S. International Team; and this article is so thorough, comprehensive and interesting that, rather than cut it down to go into this crowded issue, we have decided to hold it over until November, in which issue it will be published in its entirety. In the meanwhile we give here the total scores of the three highest teams in this year's International:

Position	Switzerland	Sweden	United States
Standing	1,698	1,652	1,639
Kneeling	1,825	1,784	1,815
Prone	1,868	1,903	1,885
Aggregate	5,391	5,339	5,339

Third Division Rifle and Pistol Matches

THE Annual Third Division Regional and State Matches, held under the auspices of the Washington State Rifle Association, and sanctioned by the N. R. A., were fired at Fort Lewis, Wash., August 13-16. A School of Instruction similar to the Small-Arms School held in conjunction with the National Rifle Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, preceded the record shooting. Although details of the tournament at Fort Lewis are not available, official bulletins of the matches which are reproduced below clearly indicate the success of the shoot.

Both from the standpoint of attendance and participation in the numerous matches, as well as the remarkably good scores made at Fort Lewis, this annual tournament might truly be called the Camp Perry of the Northwest.

The following bulletins show the medal winners in all matches:

MOUNTAIN VIEW OUTSHOOTS SANTA CRUZ

THE following account, taken from the San Francisco Examiner of July 31, reached us too late to go into our September issue:

The Mountain View Rifle Club members were guests of the Santa Cruz Rifle Club on the latter's new range Sunday. In a shoulder to shoulder competition match both clubs were represented by a six-man team. Ideal wind and light conditions prevailed for the entire day, and the visiting team was loud in its praise of the fine new Santa Cruz range.

Final scores fired for the 50-shot course covering 200, 300 and 500 yards slow and rapid fire gave the Mountain View team a winning margin of eleven points, to take the match.

Those firing and scores:

SANTA CRUZ
1. E. Harris	220
2. W. Stanley	232
3. P. Johnston	232
4. C. Roberts	225
5. R. Rice	220
6. W. Lutz	230

2. O. Featherstone	214
3. A. Bodenschatz	237
4. K. Grant	227
5. R. Smith	227
6. C. Smith	229
Total	1,370

Right after deer season these clubs will hold return matches, and some hot individual competition can be expected.

A CORRECTION

OFFICIAL BULLETIN No. 12, covering results of the American Individual Dewar Match, which bulletin was reproduced in the September issue of THE AMERICAN RIFLEMAN, shows that Mr. C. R. Brong, Allentown, Pa., was disqualified on account of using telescopic sights in this match. It has now developed that Mr. Brong's judge inadvertently filled in the match certificate and that Brong really fired the match, using metallic sights. His score of 388 has, therefore, been accepted as official and he is entitled to twentieth place in the individual Dewar Match.

DAVENPORT "KING SHOOT"

DAVENPORT, IOWA, August 20, 1928.

THE Davenport Shooting Association has been holding a so-called "King Shoot" every year since 1863, which is 65 years ago. Think of a live, going aggregation of Schuetzen riflemen surviving such a long time! Although our membership is not as large as in olden times, still the shooting activities are as good as ever.

This year there gathered 24 men at the range in competition at 200 yards in the Schuetzen offhand style, any rifle or equipment permitted. Chris. Jansen won the King's medal. (The first shot of the three that are shot by each on the honor target decides the winner.) This time Mr. Jansen made a 24 on his first shot; then he followed this with a 22 and a 23—total, 69 points—on the $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch ring target. W. H. Gosch also shot a 24; but his next shot being only a 19, he lost the plum. Mr. Jansen, in the last 20 years, has won the King's medal for the fifth time.

The Davenport Shooting Association is the club that held the big tournament of the Central Sharpshooters' Union in 1927, and will hold another in 1929. This club invites all riflemen in the United States to participate, and hopes to have an attendance of at least 100 Schuetzen and other riflemen.

EMIL BERG, Secretary.

A CORRECTION

A LETTER under date of August 17 from Mr. E. E. Dittbrenner, President of the Missouri State Rifle and Pistol Association, reads in part as follows:

"In the July issue of THE AMERICAN RIFLEMAN you carried an ad of the Western Cartridge Co. giving a list of winners in the Missouri State Matches last May * * *."

"There was an error in the fifth place in the Free Pistol Match, this being given to Sgt. F. M. Matkin, of the St. Louis Police Department. Mr. E. H. Stuerman, of St. Louis, tied Sergeant Matkin. In the shootoff afterwards he beat him, so that fifth place rightly belongs to Mr. Stuerman * * *."

WAKEFIELD MATCHES

It is regretted that nothing approaching complete details of the Annual Wakefield Matches is available at the time that we go to press. From information obtained in conversation with the various shooters who attended the Wakefield Matches it is apparent that this year's competitions were better attended than has been the case of any of the New England Matches in the past several years. There was an increased turnout of civilians, which was very encouraging to the officers in charge of the competitions. A particular effort is being made to attract civilian shooters to the Wakefield Matches, which, in addition to being one of the classic shooting events of the year in the United States, afford a real opportunity for the riflemen of New England who are unable to get to the National Matches to take part in competition of a Class A character.

The Hayden Team Match, headliner of the Wakefield Tournament, fired under National Team Match conditions, was won by the Marine Corps Team with an aggregate of 2,818, the Navy Team being runner-up with 2,804. Twelve teams participated, of which three were from the Marine Corps, two from the Navy, two from the Coast Guard, three civilian teams and one each from the Massachusetts National Guard and New Jersey National Guard. The high civilian team finished in eighth place with a total of 2,604.

Skeet Shooting Association and well-known writer on firearms. Mr. W. H. Foster, president of the National Skeet Shooting Association, visited Camp for a day or two, but was unable to remain longer.

Skeet seemed to appeal to the shooters at Perry, and the boys were wont to gather at the semicircular field in the late afternoon, after coming from the rifle range, and spend the balance of the daylight hours in trying to learn how to connect with the more difficult of the flying targets. There was much hilarity and friendly joshing, until approaching darkness put an end to the sport for that day.

The great final match of the shoot—the National Rifle Team Match—fired on Friday, September 14, and Saturday, September 15, was won this year by the Marine Corps, with the Navy second, Infantry third, Cavalry fourth, while the District of Columbia National Guard Team took fifth place, with the California Civilians sixth.

National Junior Matches a Great Battle

DAVID McDUGAL WINS AT CAMP PERRY

A WORD picture can not adequately describe the activities and accomplishments of the Junior camp conducted at Camp Perry, Ohio, in conjunction with the National Matches. To you who are members of the Junior Rifle Corps, you would have to attend and participate to appreciate just what the Junior school is and how it functions. These matches are now held every year during the week devoted to the School of Instruction for the senior matches, and every member who can possibly attend future events should make every effort to do so.

Again the matches were a huge success. The week's program of instruction and competition kept everyone on the alert at all times striving at their best for high places in the various events conducted each day. Capt. John T. Zellars, noted in military circles for his ability as an athletic coach and stationed at the Lanier High School, in Macon, Ga., arriving in camp one week previous to the matches had everything in readiness by Sunday, August 26, when competitors were registered, received their equipment and were assigned to quarters. Some of the Junior riflemen camped with their parents in the squaw camp at the Club House, or lived near by, but an area of tents was provided for those who came primarily for the matches alone. This area of quarters was just across the street from the Junior ranges, with headquarters established in one of the tents. This location and arrangement worked out most satisfactorily, as it was convenient and did not in any way interfere with other activities conducted during the period in which the matches were held.

Three ranges had been constructed, two sets of target frames for each, with twelve firing points staked and marked with a "ready line" for added relays. Behind the "ready line" were benches on which competitors waited their turn on the ranges, and to the rear a large tent fly, from which targets were distributed and scored.

Promptly at 8 o'clock on Monday morning 42 campers assembled, received camp regulation instructions and were acquainted with the Junior Rifle Corps Resolve and Code. The program for the week was then read. Captain Zellars, assisted by Lieut.

Harry Renshaw, of Nogales, Ariz., who carried off the championship in the 1924 Camp Perry Junior Matches, then devoted the remainder of the day to instruction.

After preliminary instruction the camp was divided into squads of four with a non-commissioned officer in charge of each. The schedule for the course follows:

MONDAY, AUGUST 27

8-8:30 a. m.—(1) Organization into groups. Explanation of object, purpose and membership of the N. R. A. Junior Rifle Corps. (2) Reading of Resolution and Code of N. R. A. Junior Corps. (3) Brief outline of week's program.

8:30-9 a. m.—Instruction, care and cleaning of rifle. Checking shooting equipment.

9-10:15 a. m.—Explanation and demonstration: Sighting and aiming exercises. Practical work: First exercise; second exercise; third exercise. Test.

10:15-10:30 a. m.—Rest period.

10:30-11:45 a. m.—Position exercises: Explanation and demonstration; practical work; the gun sling; blackening sights; taking up slack; holding breath; general rules for positions.

1-3 p. m.—Position exercises: Explanation and demonstration; practical work; the prone position; the sitting position; the kneeling position; the standing position.

3-4 p. m.—Trigger squeeze exercise: Explanation and demonstration; practical work.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 28

8-11:30 a. m.—Review of previous work; instruction in sight adjustment; "dry" shooting, prone position only; instruction in range rules and safety precautions.

The camp was next divided into groups, the A group for those between the ages of 16 and 18 and the B group for those between 12 and 15. The first event—the prone match for each group—was next on schedule. From then on the crack of the rifle was constant, every member making every endeavor to place among the three high for medals.

The Prone Match called for 30 shots for record. When all targets were in and re-scored Lawrence Wilkens, of Norwood, Ohio, had led the A group with 296 x 300, while Bradford Wiles, of Chicago, Ill., led the B group with 294 x 300. James Hurt, of Indianapolis, Ind., and David McDougal, of Washington, D. C., followed in the A group; James Butterworth, of Highland Park, Ill., and Alfred Stuart, of Wilmington, Del., placed in the medals in the younger group.

Wednesday was another day. Orders were read for the day with announcements of the previous day's matches. Instruction was given to correct errors, and the remainder of the morning devoted to dry shooting for the prone and sitting positions. The prone and sitting matches for each group were then fired in the afternoon. By this time all were better acquainted with the match regulations and realized that they were serious competitive events. Going into two positions, with two strings in each, the high places were the objective, for the three high men in each group were to receive medals. David McDougal led the A group with 389 x 400, with Bradford Wiles again leading the B group with 372 x 400.

Again on Thursday at assembly orders for the day and the previous day's scores were read to the camp. As the scheduled match called for three positions—prone, sitting and kneeling—added instruction was given in the kneeling position with correction for the previous day's firing. Dry shooting next followed for the sitting and kneeling positions. In the afternoon the match was under way, and as completed targets were turned in for a recheck a very noticeable improvement was noted in the scores. The kneeling position bothered those who had taken up the position for the first time, but they were determined to master it and make as good a showing as possible. David McDougal again led the A group, while Bradford Wiles continued to hold the edge on the Junior competitors, taking high place for the third consecutive day.

Friday brought the finals in the group matches leading up to the four positions. The morning was spent the same as on the previous day with intensive instruction in the standing position. To eliminate delays and allow the members to do their best the match was started early, completing the prone position before noon. David McDougal continued to lead the field in the A group, turning in 377 x 400, while Bradford Wiles still showed the way with 341 x 400 in the B group. Wiles turned in a possible in the prone position, the first of the matches and the only one submitted during the complete week.

The real battle of the week was staged on Saturday, when age restrictions were eliminated and all Junior competitors fired the four-position course for the Camp Perry National Individual Championship. The previous matches completed had given many the needed encouragement, and when the first shot was fired every one was at their best, striving for the stake ahead. It was a great battle. As targets were made in the various positions they were immediately rescored and interest was tense. McDougal and Wilkens were fighting for every point, and if ever competitors worked, those two fellows surely did. Reading through the scores of the ten high competitors listed below, note that these lads tied in the prone, sitting and kneeling positions with 99, 97, 95, respectively. It was in the standing position that the tie was finally broken, when McDougal made an 87, giving him the championship and gold medal for the second consecutive year. Wilkens turned in an 83 for the silver medal. If it were possible to award two gold medals in this event Wilkens would be entitled to it as the Junior riflemen are evenly matched. Wilkens later demonstrated his ability with the small-bore rifle in the Caswell Team Matches when he turned in the first possible score over the Dewar Course at 50 and 100 yards. This feat may some day be duplicated, but not often.

As a fitting climax to the week's activities the camp assembled at noon at headquarters for a special presentation of medal awards. The camp band first rendered several appropriate selections. Brig. Gen. M. A. Reckord, Executive Vice President of the National Rifle Association, then addressed the assembly, congratulating them on their achievements of the week and encouraging them to carry on in their home communities the message of the Junior Rifle Corps. Col. Hu B. Myers, Executive Officer, then presented the medals—silver to the high man in each group for each day, with bronze medals to the next two places. Gold, silver and bronze medals were awarded the three high places in the National Individual Championship. Refreshments were then served and the campers departed enthused, contemplating their renewal of friendships in competition next year.

Because of the limited time allotted to the Junior matches the novelty events were omitted. However, members were permitted to qualify for individual Junior Rifle Corps medal awards. Crediting the scores made during the week in the matches every member in camp made at least the Marksman rating. This is a real accomplishment.

Giving credit where credit is due, Capt. J. Zellars is entitled to his full share, as the week's successful program can largely be attributed to his never ceasing interest and enthusiasm. Lieut. H. Renshaw also helped greatly in the success of the school by his constant attention to duty and his congenial good humor.

ALLEGHANY AND GREENBRIER REPEAT IN NATIONAL CAMP MATCHES

THE slogan you have often heard, "bigger and better," again describes the National Matches conducted for affiliated boy and girl camps the past season. With close to 100 teams representing 83 camps from all parts of the country the competition was as keen and close as any matches could be. The spirit in which each of these camps entered and the clean sportsmanship displayed has placed the sport of rifle practice in a niche all its own among the many activities conducted in the camps. The extreme accuracy and control which targets submitted testify to proves beyond doubt the educational value of this wonderful sport in teaching patience, perseverance and self-control, so vitally necessary when one stacks up against the every-day battle of competition.

The outstanding feature of these matches was the remarkable shooting of the girls at Camp Alleghany, of Roncverte, W. Va. By submitting a five-man team score of 963 they bettered team scores in both divisions, thereby clearly demonstrating their right to Girl National Camp Championship honors. This makes the sixth consecutive year the championship has gone to Camp Alleghany, a record to be proud of and the reward for much effort and time. This achievement is all the more remarkable for Miss Helen Prentiss, instructor in charge, did not alone concentrate her efforts on a few to the neglect of the many girls in camp, but entered a second team which, true to form, placed second just 16 points down from the leaders. The winning team and their scores follows:

	1	2	Total
Virginia Robertson	98	97	195
Christine Heer	97	97	194
Frances Hulihan	96	96	192
Josephine Raynor	96	95	191
Virginia Sheffield	93	98	191
Total			963

Camp Abena, of Belgrade Lakes, Me., can always be counted upon to make competition interesting. This camp stepped up a few notches over its standing last year, taking third honors. The three teams representing the Teela-Wooket Camps, of Roxbury, Vt., followed in rapid order, taking the next three places.

Not to be outdone by their sister camp, Camp Greenbrier, of Alderson, W. Va., carried off the 1928 Camp Championship in the Boys' Division with a team score of 961. Instructor John Plugge, who also coached his team to these honors last year, had some threatening competition to contend with in the name of Camp Wyomissing, of North Water Gap, Pa. In scoring the targets it looked as though the championship would go to the Keystone State, but on final tabulation Camp Wyomissing fell short just 2 points, having a five-man-team score of 959. Greenbrier's second team followed, taking third honors with a score of 949. Camp Wigwam's first team placed fourth with 942, followed by Camp Manning, of Andover, Mass., and Machigonne, of Raymond, Me., with 936 and 930, respectively. It is interesting to note that the camps taking the first five places in this match had more than one team entered. These instructors have caught the spirit of the Junior Rifle Corps by giving as many as possible the opportunity to bring honors to their institution.

Each of the 240 affiliated camps were supplied with the new standard 50-foot 10-point targets. Teams of ten with 20 shots for record prone per man, five high scores to count, constituted the conditions. Camp Greenbrier's winning combination follows:

	1	2	Total
P. Worthington	98	97	195
S. C. Dawson, Jr.	97	96	193
G. B. Baldwin, Jr.	96	97	193
L. Q. Chancellor	95	96	191
B. Clarkson	96	93	189
Total			961

These fine scores and the enthusiasm with which the new camps entered, realizing that they must compete with camps of long experience, are indeed pleasing. We have wondered if perhaps the handicap were too severe; but when one stops to consider that perfection is only attained through constant practice, it would scarcely be fair to our older camps, where so much time is devoted, to the sport, to ask them to give others a handicap, for they, too, have new boys and girls coming every season.

This year special medals for the members and cup trophies were awarded Camps Alleghany and Greenbrier, winners in the Girls' and Boys' Divisions, respectively. We want to congratulate the winners and offer our appreciation for the support and co-operation each contesting camp contributed in making these matches so successful. We hope this co-operation will continue throughout the winter months and that members will carry on the good work started by affiliating with or organizing Junior Rifle Clubs in their home towns.

1929 MEMBERSHIP

THE individual medal course of qualifications, taking the beginner from Pro-Marksman through the stages of Marksman, Sharpshooter, Possible Bars, Expert Rifleman and Distinguished Rifleman, with a complete schedule of team matches conducted biweekly in series with several special individual and team contests, furnishes a full program of competition for the Junior rifleman during the gallery season. However, before taking on these events the matter of affiliation is important. Although individuals and clubs affiliated are in good standing for the calendar year, it is suggested and advisable that members and especially school clubs reaffiliate at this time. By reaffiliating now just as the year's work is getting under way you can prepare and compete in the splendid program of competition set up for you without any interruption. It is distressing, to say the least, to find your team halfway through the matches and suddenly learn that your membership has lapsed and that there is a possibility of having your scores disqualified. Now is the time to submit your fee, thus eliminating this possible let-down in your program on the first of the year.

By affiliating now much of the rush and delays that are bound to occur in handling the many individual and club applications, should all individual members and clubs wait until the last day of the year, will be avoided. It will not be necessary for clubs to go through the many details experienced when first affiliating, for all that is needed is a revised list of active members and club officers with their home addresses. With this should be included the $5 reaffiliation fee.

Individual members should submit one of the regular individual application blanks properly filled in. If these are not available, send on your name and address, also the reaffiliation fee of 25 cents. You will then be placed in good standing for another year. So many members of our organization have become over age or have moved from the address which they submitted on their application blank that our files in many cities and States are somewhat irregular. With the plan of each member advising of any change of address throughout the year and re-registering annually it will be possible for us to clear our files and carry only those who are actively interested.

Presented during the first season of rifle-shooting at Camp Taylow, Mobile, Ala., we have 83 Pro-Marksman Medals, 32 Marksman Medals, 9 Sharpshooter Medals and 20 Possible Bars. All of these campers have purchased their awards, and in addition to the club affiliation 137 affiliated as individual members of the Corps. Mr. Seeger, Scout executive and instructor of rifle-shooting, advises that the camp will again open during the Christmas holidays, at which time rifle-shooting will be one of the featured activities.

NEW SERIES OF BIWEEKLY MATCHES

THE new plan of biweekly matches to be conducted throughout the winter months for all Junior clubs affiliated with the National Rifle Association is very similar to the one so successfully completed last spring. These matches should again prove as interesting and meet with the whole-hearted approval and acceptance of every club, as experience has caused all rough spots to be ironed out, making for a smooth-running program of group matches. The plan was originally arranged from suggestions and criticisms submitted by instructors who have sponsored clubs of the Corps for several years and are thoroughly familiar with Junior competitions.

The many suggestions received from newer associates offering their assistance and co-operation in making the Junior program of team matches so attractive were most gratifying. With this support there could be no doubt as to the popularity of these events, for the plan comes nearer to satisfying and encouraging the beginners as well as the experienced shooting clubs. The plan in a nutshell is one of encouragement throughout with divisions and grades of higher standing to work for and proper incentives to keep the interest lasting.

Generally when a program runs throughout the year interest lags before the contest is completed; but not so with this particular plan, for it is arranged in short periods of five and six matches in three divisions, according to team shooting strength. Clubs are classified and encouraged to improve, thereby enabling them to move up into faster competition throughout the matches for more valuable prizes.

The first period, consisting of six biweekly matches, gets under way with the first match arranged for the week ending October 6. If your club hasn't as yet submitted its entry and fee of one dollar for the complete series, submit it at once, so that the special targets may go forward with the complete conditions. The returns for the first match completed designate the division A, B or C in which your club will compete. Division A will consist of the more experienced clubs qualified to make high team scores, while Division B consists of the less experienced clubs and Division C the beginners. Prizes are awarded the three high teams in each of the divisions at the completion of each series of matches. Clubs, however, may advance to higher grading throughout a series of matches provided their scores submitted warrant this advancement.

The second period of six biweekly matches gets under way with the match arranged for the week ending January 12, and the third period of five matches April 6. Teams will be reclassified for divisions by scores submitted in the first match of each period of matches.

In tabulating returns for each match the ten high teams in each division A, B and C receive points according to their standing, and at the close of each period of matches the teams having the highest total of points are the winners. In Division A the ten high teams receive points in multiples of 30 up to 300 for each match—that is, the highest team in each match in a period will receive 300 points, while the team placing second in each match will get 270 points, and so on down the line. In Division B the ten high teams in each match receive points in multiples of 20 up to 200. The high team in this division gets 200 points, while the team placing second gets 180, and so on down. Division C teams also receive points but in multiples of 10 up to 100. The team placing high in each match gets 100 points, while the team placing second gets 90 points, etc.

Should a team in any one period of matches submit a score of higher classification it will receive first honors in the division in which it completed its match with the corresponding number of points for credit. The following week it will be entered as of the higher classification and carry over with it the points gained in the lower division.

The plan at a glance may seem somewhat confusing to clubs that have not as yet added it to their program, but a trial will soon convince you of the simplicity of its arrangement, as all records are compiled at National Headquarters and bulletins published at the completion of each match. The conditions of the match are given below. Talk it up with the members of your club and submit your entry and fee now, so that you may have the advantage of an early start for higher rating at the completion of the series.

MOSTLY PERSONAL

A VERY interesting report of the annual banquet of the Tome Camp, Port Deposit, Md., was received from Instructor W. H. Driver. The gathering was held in the Camp Lodge, a building ideally adapted for such an occasion. Out of a total enrollment of 40 campers approximately 60 per cent qualified for medals ranging from the ranks of Pro-Marksman to Sharpshooter, Noel Welsh, of Baltimore, Jack Harris, of Buffalo, N. Y., and Jack Leidecker, of Marietta, Ohio, winning the highest awards. At the same time other camp awards were made. Instructor Driver also writes: "For a summary of the success of rifle-shooting at Camp Tome this season—we are proud of our record."

Rifle-shooting proved a popular activity at Camp Wigwam, Harrison, Me., during the past season with 149 campers participating. A fine outdoor range has been constructed with an improved lighting system which makes it possible to shoot at night.

As National Headquarters looks forward to another season of activities throughout the gallery year we feel that our efforts are rewarded by the many paragraphs of encouragement from directors who have successfully conducted rifle-shooting as a feature of their summer camp program. Mr. James

H. Rich, of Camp Osceola, Hendersonville, N. C., has written us: "I want to tell you how much we at Osceola appreciate your kind attention to all of our requests. Our medals came in perfect shape and the exact number that I asked for, also the membership buttons and all of the diplomas. We thank you for this splendid co-operation."

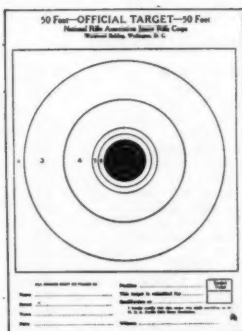

Rev. G. A. Campbell, of Camp St. John's, French Woods, N. Y., a newcomer in the Corps, writes us: "We have had a most pleasant rifle-shooting season at the camp and I am indeed well satisfied in having had my camp affiliated with the N. R. A. J. R. C."

Mr. Theodore Mommers, of Camp Lincoln, Keeseville, N. Y., writes: "This is the second year that our camp has been affiliated with the Junior Rifle Corps, and it is noticeable that a greater number of boys are interested each year."

Another of our newly affiliated camps, Alleghany, of Clifton Forge, Va., has distributed many of the Junior Rifle Corps awards among its campers, and Mr. E. P. Childs, Jr., writes: "Our boys have derived a great deal of pleasure and benefit from their work on the range, and each of the boys is very proud of his connection with the National Rifle Association."

Instructor Irving Kassoy has completed his second year of rifle instruction through affiliation of Camp Pawnee, Southington, Conn., and has written us the following: "I certainly appreciate the splendid service that you are constantly rendering to rifle practice at Camp Pawnee."

For the benefit of those interested in individual and team competition we are pleased to announce that Sharpshooters Sanford W. Binns, Jr., and Ryland Ward are anxious to take on two man team matches. Anyone interested may get in touch with these riflemen at 106 North Twenty-seventh Street, Richmond, Va.

COLT'S OFFICIAL POLICE REVOLVER CHAMPION OF CHAMPIONS

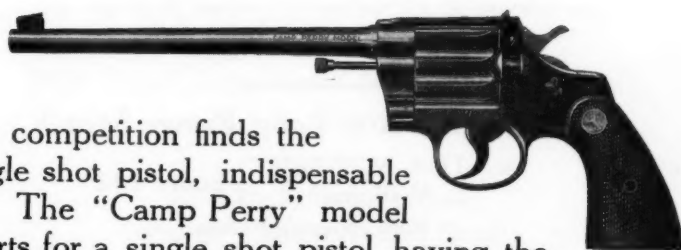

GROWING recognition of the accuracy, perfect balance and dependability of Colt's .38 caliber "Official Police" Revolver has made this model first choice of expert shooters in both competition and service, especially where the larger calibers are called for. This arm was the 100 per cent winner in all such events at the 1928 Camp Perry Matches. It established the world's record score in Police Pistol Team Competition—(1105) in 1927. The utter reliability of Colt's Revolvers and Automatic Pistols resulting from absolute precision of manufacture, inspections and tests have reduced these contests to a question of individual shooting efficiency and proves, unquestionably, that "Your Hand is Steadier with a Colt."

COLT'S "CAMP PERRY" MODEL .22 SINGLE SHOT PISTOL

THE CHOICE OF EXPERTS

The man who shoots in practice or competition finds the "Camp Perry" model, caliber .22 single shot pistol, indispensable in the development of high scoring. The "Camp Perry" model Colt's meets the demand of target experts for a single shot pistol having the same sure grip, balance, accuracy and action as the heavier arms. With it, the shooter can change at will from the caliber .38 revolver to the .22 pistol without change of grip or style of holding.

Fifth place is rather high for a National Guard team in this match, as is sixth place for a civilian team. Last year the high National Guard team was New York, in sixth place, while the Ohio Civilians, the high civilian team, took tenth place.

Though the weather conditions of the two days during which this match was shot were, on the whole, very favorable, yet it will be observed that the scores this year, clear through, are consistently and markedly lower than they were last year. This is to be attributed to the poor accuracy of the 1928 ammunition, regarding which complaint was frequently heard on all sides.

Before taking leave of this greatest shooting event in the history of the country it is more than fitting that a few words be said concerning the general conduct of the matches and the men responsible for it. Col. Hu B. Myers has been well known in the past as Assistant Executive Officer of the National Matches. This year, the greatest and most successful year of all in the history of the matches, Colonel Myers carried full responsibility as Executive Officer, and there is no question that the great success of the entire event was due in no small measure to his ability, energy, calm and genial nature and to his sincere spirit of co-operation and helpfulness. It was stated on more than one occasion that the National Matches this year were run more smoothly and more efficiently than ever before.

The Statistical Office, under Maj. A. R. Emery, of the 16th Infantry Brigade, ably assisted, carried a heavier burden than in past years, yet functioned splendidly. The official National Match bulletins, beginning on page 28 of this issue, were furnished by the Statistical Office regularly each day; and such special questions as arose received prompt and courteous attention.

The Publicity Department endeared itself to the writer, for without its assistance and co-operation much of the material and most of the photographs published herewith could have been secured only with great difficulty. This department was originally in charge of Capt. J. H. Platt, U. S. M. C.; but due to sickness Captain Platt was obliged to leave Camp August 28, his place being taken by Capt. K. C. Althouse, Infantry, assisted by Capt. W. J. Niederpruem, Infantry, and 1st Lieut. L. W. Yarborough, Infantry, with 1st Lieut. H. W. Johnson, of the Signal Corps, in charge of photography.

NOTICE

MR. E. H. DUDDEN, the well-known English gunmaker, of Philadelphia, begs to remind his numerous customers that he is leaving for England early in December, to visit the London and Birmingham gun trade. He will be back early in April, 1929.

Woodchuck Hunting in the Catskill Mountains

By EDWARD H. PROUDMAN

THE Editor has requested me to write about some of my experiences as a big-game hunter in different parts of the world. I have been doing some traveling and hunting almost every year since about 1885; and locally, as a boy, even before that time. I have photographed nearly all of the famous places in this country and Canada, as well as the West Indies, Central America, parts of South America, most of the countries of Europe, Africa, the Holy Lands, India, Burma, the Malay Peninsula, Sumatra, Java, Formosa, China (1,500 miles from the coast), Siberia, Korea, Japan, some of the Pacific Islands and as far north as 600 miles inside of the Arctic Circle. I have been in every State of the Union except Oklahoma, most of them a great many times. I have had a limited experience in big-game hunting in Africa and tiger hunting in the East, but there is one kind of hunting that has never lost its attraction for me—woodchuck hunting in the Catskill Mountains.

In 1894 I shot my first woodchuck in the Catskills, and since then have shot a large number. For the past eight or ten years I have managed to spend about sixty-five days a year, nearly every year, at this sport, usually averaging from six to twelve chucks a day. Some days the score was as low as two, but there were other days when it would be fifteen, and some days more than twenty. So that in the aggregate the chucks shot during this period run into a large number. Writing about anything as common as woodchuck hunting is difficult, and I do not expect to introduce any new ideas. But there is always a younger generation growing up, and the elementary school will never be abolished. There is no law on woodchucks and the season is from the time they come out in the spring until they hole up in the fall. In the lowlands of Westchester and Dutchess Counties they appear as early as February, and I have always shot some in March when the snow is still on the ground in some places; but in the mountains there are not enough out to warrant a trip before May.

They hole up about the tenth to the fifteenth of September, even though the weather may still be warm. There are two good times of the day in which to hunt chucks—the early morning when the dew is still on the grass, and the afternoon from four to six-thirty, standard time. The afternoon is always the better.

If days can be selected, choose one when the sun is not too hot. A hazy day or one with light showers is better than one with hot sun. The best time is when the sun reappears after a rain, particularly if this happens to occur about four o'clock.

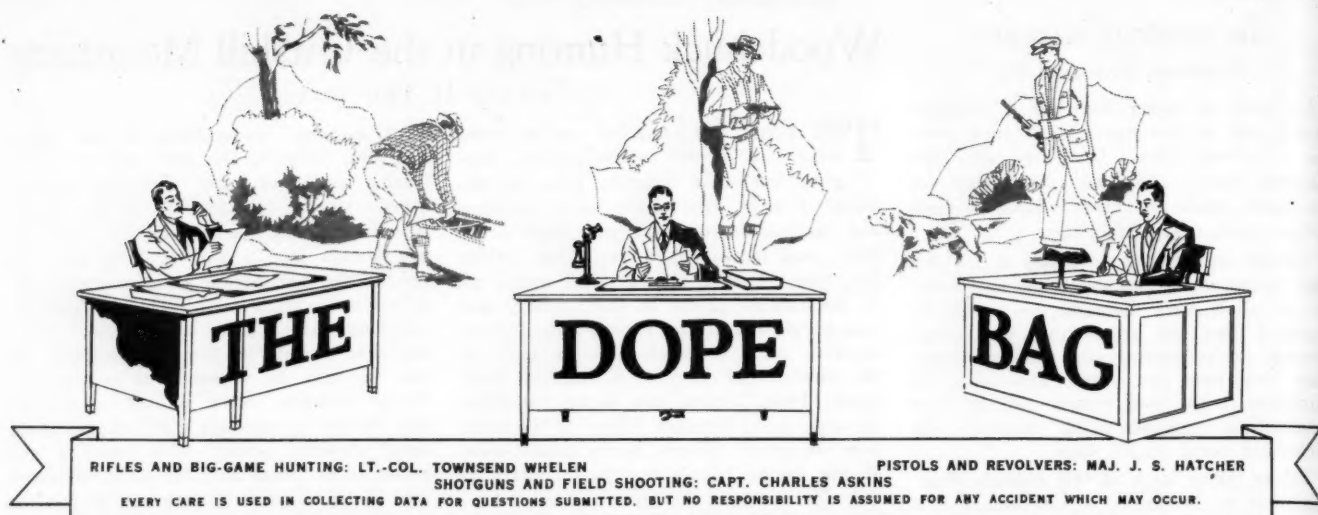

Never walk along the top of a ridge when looking for woodchucks, nor accept an exposed position. The chucks will always see you before you see them. Never appear suddenly over the top of a hill, nor make any quick motions. In stalking, if the chuck sees you, freeze to the spot until he starts feeding again, or raise your rifle slowly, never trying to take him by assault. If he runs for the hole before you fire, wait; he will always stop a few seconds when he reaches the hole before going in (unless he is too badly frightened). This is your opportunity. If he is an old one don't waste any time waiting for him to come out. If not, he may be expected to reappear in twenty minutes. Some interesting matches may be had by selecting a rifleman of about equal shooting ability with yourself and taking turns. Last May Mr. Chas. Gebhardt took a two days' trip with me to Dutchess County. Going up one day and returning the next, we shot 38 chucks, about an equal number for each man. In June Mr. "Ted" Everett and I had a shoot one afternoon. We took up a position on top of a knoll between two hills at the head of a valley. We lay prone and shot in all directions, each taking his shot in turn wherever it might happen to be. A miss was a miss. At the end of three hours we quit, with an equal score of eight chucks apiece. Luck favored me a little this time, as when most of the long shots showed up it happened to be Ted's turn to shoot. Every chuck had to be anchored to count, and we were careful to make only head or shoulder shots. In July I shot eleven one afternoon from this same knoll while up with Joe Bauman, the well-known rifle-stock maker. Joe shot nearly as many, although he was handicapped by having no telescope.

We fell in with a local man who had an old Ballard rifle, so rusty that the action would not work. I bought it for five dollars and told Joe I was going to soak it in kerosene, but Joe said no. "Water put him on, water take him off; soak him in water for three days." I probably would have rejected such advice from anyone else, but not from Joe. I soaked it in water for three days, after first removing the stock, and was surprised at the amount of rust that came off. The action then worked as well as ever; and after drying it I oiled it up, and it is now O. K. I find that this method can be used with any rusty iron or steel, and is good dope to pass along.

THE TURNING

Said the King of Woodchuck Valley
To the Prince of Woodchuck Glen.
"It's time we rid the world of these Accursed hunter-men.
"Life isn't worth a tinker's dam
With such as they around;
You risk your hide the moment you
Emerge from under ground.
"The hunters we in turn will hunt,
Merciless, aye, and sure;
Till we've rid the land of their varmint breed
For ever and ever more.
"The kick of a rifle's rather rough
For a chuck to have to stand,
But it's better, aye, and some to spare
Than the white-hot muzzle-end.
"So call the clan together now,
And gird them for the fray;
And perhaps we all may live to see
A better, safer day."

Gun Slings and Swivels

WILL the 1917 sling fit the Model 54 Winchester? If not, which sling would you recommend? Sling to be used chiefly for carrying purposes.—R. E. V.

Answer (by Colonel Whelen). I have yours of June 15. There are two gun slings sold to members of the N. R. A. by the Director of Civilian Marksmanship—the "Gun sling, Model 1907, leather," price $1.31, and the "Gun sling, Model 1917, webbing," price $1.16. Of these the former or leather sling is very much the best in every way. The webbing sling slips and does not stay in place, and no experienced rifleman would have it if he could possibly get the leather sling.

Either of these slings can be used with the Winchester, Model 54, rifle, or with any other rifle having those abominable screw-eye attachments to fore arm and butt stock; but to attach the sling to the screw eyes you must first obtain from the Winchester Repeating Arms Co. two of their sling-swivel snap hooks, made for 1¼-inch strap. This will accomplish the purpose; but this method of attaching the gun sling is about the poorest that can be devised, and is only used on standard factory commercial arms because it is cheap and allows the rifles so equipped to be sold at a low price, which is an advantage in advertising and in competition, but no advantage to the user. The swivel snap hooks rotate and permit the sling to get all tangled up, and the hooks rattle in the screw eyes in a most aggravating manner when one is hunting and wishes to be noiseless. The above swivel snap hooks cost 35 cents each.

A very much better arrangement is to equip your rifle butt stock with a "Stock swivel base complete with bow and two base screws for 1¼-inch strap" in place of the screw eye which is screwed into the butt stock of the rifle; price 60 cents from the Winchester company. Also take the screw eye out of the fore arm and replace it with a "Fore-arm screw-eye swivel complete with escutcheon and washer"—price 50 cents—also from the Winchester company. Specify that both must be for 1¼-inch strap. You will then have a really good outfit with the Government leather sling, although that sling is rather heavy and bulky. It would be better to specify the above attachments for 1-inch strap, and then have some leather worker make you a slightly lighter gun sling, of narrower and lighter, but strong and soft leather, an exact model of the Government 1907 gun sling. Or in place of the Government sling you could have one of the so-called "Whelen" gun slings, made as described in the book, "The American Rifle."

Personally, on all my sporting rifles I have always preferred to use the Winchester detachable type of sling swivel. This was the swivel which was used on the butt stock of the .30-40 Winchester, Model 1895, musket. One pushed a little plunger on the side of the swivel, and the swivel then detached readily from the very small eye on the stock or fore arm. This swivel is strong, noiseless, and I think the most satisfactory one I have ever seen. Its use has now become almost universal on all of the finest made-to-order sporting rifles. It is easily applied to the stock or fore arm direct, or in connection with barrel bands, or the eye, for it may be sweated directly to the underside of the barrel in front of the fore arm tip. It takes a leather gun sling, preferably of the "Whelen" type, 13/16 inch wide.

About three months ago the Winchester company ran entirely out of their stock of these detachable sling swivels, and no more can be obtained from them. They asked me particularly to make this announcement, as they continue to have many orders for them which they can not fill. Griffin & Howe, the rifle-makers, of 234 East 39th Street, New York, N. Y., are now making up these detachable sling swivels, practically the same as Winchester used to make them, but with a slight improvement as to length, and are now in position to retail them at 75 cents each, or $1.50 per pair, and 35 cents each for the screw eyes which either screw into the stock or pass through the fore arm to a nut beneath the barrel or to a lug on the underside of a band. They are also selling them in considerable quantity at a discount to gunsmiths and dealers.

You state that you wish the gun sling chiefly for carrying purposes. I presume that this remark indicates that you have not yet trained yourself to use the gun sling as an aid to steady holding of the rifle in the sitting, kneeling, and prone positions. If that is a fact you are missing out badly in the efficiency and pleasure you can get from any rifle. The gun sling is of enormous assistance in shooting in these positions, and the man who is not trained to its use is hopelessly handicapped when pitted against one who is so trained. The use of the gun sling in these positions is compulsory in the Army, and it is so used by every rifleman of any experience. I am inclosing a little booklet on marksmanship which describes its use briefly, but for a full description of its use and its advantages you should obtain a copy of "Training Regulations No. 150-5, Marksmanship, Rifle, Individual." I am also inclosing a memorandum relative to the procurement of those regulations which you will note you can obtain from the Director of Civilian Marksmanship for the large sum of 10 cents, coin, not stamps.

DOPE ON .32-20 AMMUNITION IN REVOLVERS

I AM going to purchase one of the .32-20 Smith & Wesson revolvers, and would appreciate some information regarding same. Is the regular factory-loaded smokeless powder cartridge too powerful for a revolver? I like the .32-20 cartridge, but I have an idea that it takes a rather longer barrel than 6 inches to burn all the powder in the .32-20 case. I have also heard that the .32-20 burns up a lot of barrels. Would the new Remington Kleanbore cartridges remedy this? Will the .32-20 revolver shoot loose sooner than one bored for the .38 Special? Which cartridge develops the most pressure per square inch—.38 Special or .32-20?—H. J. C.

Answer (by Major Hatcher). There are two kinds of .32-20 cartridges made by the ammunition factories today. One is the regular .32-20, which is intended for use in either rifles or revolvers. This is safe in any Colt or Smith & Wesson revolver.

There is another kind, however, called the .32-20 high-velocity cartridge. These high-velocity cartridges are marked on the carton, "Not for use in revolvers," and it would be dangerous to use them in a revolver as the pressure is too high.

The burning of barrels by the .32-20 can be entirely overcome by using the Remington Kleanbore cartridges.

The .32-20 revolver will not shoot loose sooner than the .38 Special.

The average pressure for the .32-20 is about 15 per cent. higher than that for the .38 Special.

REDUCING THE CHOKE IN A SHOTGUN BARREL

I HAVE a very expensive Aug. Schuler over-and-under trap-gun, made in Suhl, Germany. It has very tightly choked barrels, something like 83 per cent. Am considering having the bottom barrel opened up to a 70 per cent choke. Do you think this can be successfully done to make a good pattern, or do you think this would ruin the barrel or bore, and advise not to do it? Would like your opinion as to what you would do if it were your gun.—F. M. W.

Answer (by Captain Askins). I can not see why the barrel of your gun couldn't be relieved a bit without any trouble. The job ought not to be particularly difficult. The barrel doesn't have to be touched except in the choke. I have seen Becker of the Fox company take what choke he wanted out of a barrel in two minutes. He took a turning lathe, put in a bit or spindle, wrapped it with cloth, over that an emery paper, held the barrels in his hand and held them true, and in half a minute or less had removed enough choke to make a 70 per cent barrel out of an 80 per cent one. An ordinary gunsmith might have to work more carefully, but by cutting slowly and frequently trying the gun as the work progressed, I do not see how he could fail to make a good job. It is only the man who knows too much who is liable to make mistakes.

I do not know St. Louis gunsmiths any more; but you ought to have some men who could do a job like this. The Ithaca Gun Co. could do it, no doubt; but I'd rather take the arm where I could watch the process. After a bit of choke had been polished—not cut out with a boring tool—I'd want to pattern the gun to see for myself what was happening. It is darned easy to take steel out but hard to put it back.

Eighty-three per cent is too close a pattern for trap-shooting. Most of the best shots have now settled on about a three-quarter choke, around 68 per cent.

SELECTING A SMALL-BORE RIFLE

As you probably remember, you advised me to buy a Winchester 57 for shooting the medal course of the N. R. A. J. R. C. This gun is a good one, but I can not hold it steady enough. By this, I do not mean that it shakes a lot, but that a slight tremor will move the front sight a great deal. When I asked you, some time ago, as to what gun to get, I said that I got tired after holding the gun a short time (this was a heavy single-shot weighing about ten pounds). Now I am used to the gun sling; so I think that I can hold a heavy rifle for some time.

My ability to shoot has advanced to the point where I want a rifle that the slight tremors that do creep in will have little effect (I am not trying to brag, but occasionally I get a $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch group at 60 feet, which, I think, is not so very bad). I have the idea that a heavier rifle will move less than a light one when the "shakes" do come. Am I right? With my Winchester 57, the groups, at 60 feet, will vary a great deal in size. On the same day, with the same make and lot of ammunition, the groups will run from $\frac{1}{4}$ inch to $1\frac{1}{4}$ inches (all of my shooting is done in an indoor range; so there is no wind). I hold as near the same as I can. I have tried a number of different makes and lots of ammunition, but the groups go on the same as above. I do not condemn the rifle as inaccurate because it may be me. Do you think that it is? I have shot this rifle as nearly like you describe in your fine book, "The American Rifle"—that is, muzzle and elbow rest—as I can. But the shots "sail" all over the target, even this way. At times, when I am exceptionally steady, the groups will be a little bit smaller, once in a great many shots.

Now, the question is this: What shall I do? Shall I keep the gun I now have, or should I buy another? If the latter, what shall I get? I like the Winchester 52, after the two or three times that I have seen one. I was wondering if the rear sight was any good. It seems rather funny to me. The adjustment does not seem positive. This latter subject is also a trouble with my Winchester 57. I have never seen the Springfield caliber .22, Model 1922. How does it compare with the Winchester 52?

Simply, my question is: What is the most accurate rifle that I can get without paying a young fortune for it? Is it more accurate than the Winchester 57? I have no use for telescope sights, as they cost too much in the first place, and the N. R. A. J. R. C. does not allow them.—L. C.

Answer (by Colonel Whelen). I have yours of the 3rd. I do not recollect exactly, but I think that when you wrote to me before you particularly desired a very light .22-caliber rifle, and for that reason I recommended the Winchester Model 57 to you.

I think that if the Model 57 and the Model 52 were fired from a machine rest—say about ten of each model tested—the average accuracy of the 57's would be little if any less than the 52's. But when it comes to shooting them it is a different matter. As a result of practice we find that usually in the prone position a man can hold a well-balanced rifle of about 9 pounds' weight the steadiest. If the weight is less than this the little almost unavoidable jerks on the trigger and the little tremors of the muscles show up too much, and are often reflected in the groups obtained. In shooting offhand perhaps the average man can do best work with a rifle that is still heavier—say 11 pounds. But 9 pounds' weight is a good average for the ordinary rifleman to hold steady in all positions. If the rifle is too heavy, like the heavy 12-pound International rifles, then we find that with the average man the muscular effort of holding the heavy rifle causes a tremor, and that to hold these very heavy rifles steady it is necessary that the rifleman practice almost continuously to get accustomed to the weight and train his muscles in steady holding.

I should really advise a Winchester Model 52 rifle. It is a very excellent weapon, holds extremely well, and is as accurate as any rifle you can get. The action also is similar to that of the Model 57, with which you are familiar. The rear sight is excellent for target-shooting. It is very positive in its adjustments—more so, in fact, than most any other sight—and you will have no fault to find with it in this respect. It is also cheaper than any other rifle of equal accuracy that you can get. The Springfield is also an excellent rifle, but more expensive than the 52, and no better except in the stock. With the Model 52 almost all small-bore rifleman find that they have to put one of those rubber slip-over recoil pads on the butt to lengthen the stock, and one of the Rowley cheek pads also to raise the comb. Every single shooter at the recent Sea Girt small-bore competitions had the stock of his Model 52 modified in some such way.

But the best advice I can give you is, before you do anything, get a copy of Crossman's book, "Small-Bore Rifle-Shooting," and study it thoroughly. It is a most excellent book, and it will both point the way to excellence in the small-bore game, and at the same time save you a lot of money in equipment, costly mistakes, etc. Certainly anyone not having the information contained in this book will be hopelessly handicapped against men who have studied it. I consider the book as absolutely essential to all rifleman, and particularly to all small-bore rifleman.

SOME GOOD DOPE ON SHOTGUNS

I WOULD like your advice in selecting a shotgun.

1. Would the L. C. Smith long-range gun shoot the trap shell as good as the regular gun?

2. Would this gun be too light for the load in 8 pounds, or too heavy in $8\frac{1}{4}$ or $8\frac{3}{4}$ pounds for use a little at the traps?

3. Would the Fox be a better gun?

4. I like the Browning shotgun. What is really against this gun for trap-shooting or anything else?

5. What ammunition companies are standard?

6. Would No. 4 shot be right size for all-around shooting in Smith long-range gun for game mostly? What make?—W. B. C.

Answer (by Captain Askins). 1. The L. C. Smith long-range gun shoots two lengths of cases—3-inch if so chambered, and regularly the $2\frac{3}{4}$ -inch. If the gun were chambered for $2\frac{3}{4}$ -inch it should shoot the trap load well.

2. The gun that is found in weight about right for long-range progressive powder ammunition is just about the weight that trap shots prefer—that is, from $8\frac{1}{4}$ to $8\frac{3}{4}$ pounds.

3. I wouldn't say that the Fox gun was a better arm than the Smith; but then I wouldn't say so anyhow, even if I thought it was. We have certain good guns in America—Parker, Ithaca, Fox, Smith—and if we took the position that one of these guns was better than the others, we'd be in hot water all the time.

4. Trap-shooters seem to have made up their minds that automatic shotguns are not the right thing for the trap and have gradually quit using them for the purpose. I do not know why, but they seem to know. There is nothing in the world the matter with the Browning for any purpose, and if you wish to use it at the trap, why not?

5. The standard ammunition companies are: Western Cartridge Co., East Alton, Ill.; United States Cartridge Co., 111 Broadway, New York; Peters Cartridge Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; Remington Arms Co., Inc., Cunard Building, New York; Winchester Repeating Arms Co., New Haven, Conn. They all make fairly similar ammunition. If the Western Cartridge Co. placed their copper-plated shot on the market these might be first choice; but I do not know that they have.

Number 4 shot is well adapted to duck-shooting, in guns of 12-bore and larger, but that size is too big for all-around use; 6's are better.

Phenomenal New Record Set by American Dewar Team—7881 x 8000!

Winchester Model 52 Again the Dominating Rifle in this Great International Event

ACROSS the small-bore ranges at Camp Perry the American 1928 Dewar team shot to another Dewar match record—a phenomenal record, surpassing the best mark made up to this year by 64 points—a record of 7,881 x 8,000!

Last year, after the English team had bowled over the mark then standing, the United States team went out and hung up a new high of 7,817—a score that topped the English record by 14 points and that looked good to stand for some time to come. And yet this year finds that mark shattered by the sensational addition of 64 points.

Of the entire team of 20 members, not a man shot under 391 x 400. This, too, is probably a team record.

Altogether a record to be proud of. To the entire team, its coaches and all who contributed in any way to achieve this fine bit of shooting, we extend our heartiest congratulations.

We are proud to note that the dominating rifle used by this record-breaking American team again this year was the Winchester Model 52—the rifle that has been used by so many great small-bore champions, indoors and out, since its introduction in 1919. Twelve of the American team shot Model 52 in compiling this record score—a fact that eloquently bespeaks the verdict of the shooters as to the outstanding position of the

The great Gun and Ammunition department edited by Charles Atkins will contain features by Colonel Whelen and others of the most trustworthy experts in that field. The new magazine is considerably larger than either of the two publications which have been combined and the increased space is permitting a far wider variety of gun and hunting material in every issue. The price of the new publication is twenty-five cents a copy, $2.50 a year—the lowest price at which any outdoor magazine of equal size can be secured. The Pistol Champion of Canada

THIS IS THE TITLE held by A. N. Beketov, a member of the Winnipeg Revolver Club and a user of U. S. .22 N.R.A.'s.

Mr. Beketov, in the Canadian Revolver Association's matches, won the Indoor Pistol Championship for Seniors, turning in the fine score of 456 x 500—only one point below the Dominion record—and more than justifying his reliance upon the accuracy of U. S. Ammunition.

Dr. G. G. Murphy, another member of the Winnipeg Revolver Club and also a .22 N.R.A. user, won the Intermediate Pistol Championship, scoring 438 x 500.

Over and over again it is proved that U. S. .22 N.R.A.'s—holder of world's records and national championships—are the choice of leading shots the world over.

The reason? ACCURACY!

Shoot them at Camp Perry. They give you all you hold for . . . these famous U. S. .22 N.R.A.'s—the choice of champions here and abroad.

"Save the Colors!"

IF any regiment was ever "out of luck" it was the Eighth U. S. Infantry at the outbreak of the Civil War.

Stationed near San Antonio, Texas, at the beginning of hostilities in 1861, surrounded by the enemy in overwhelming numbers, capture was inevitable. But the battle-scarred regimental colors, carried by the Eighth through the Mexican War! They must be saved at all costs!

The Sergeant-major Joseph K. Wilson and a heroic Corporal, John C. Hesse, volunteered to carry them to safety. Wrapping them about their bodies beneath their blouses they stole through the enemy's lines. Mile after mile through a country bristling with hostile troops and inhospitable natives, they traveled until they had quitted the state.

Then a hazardous trip northward to present the sacred emblems to the President at Washington. Again the motto of the Eighth—"Patriae Fidelitas"—was upheld.
